Weir Would Make National Health Federal Concern

Minister Advocates Revision of B.N.A. Act to Give Dominion Power to Fight Great Scourges—New Policy Being Formulated for Unemployed Youths

VANCOUVER, Oct. 9 (CP).—Declaring that British Columbia was becoming a convalescent hospital for invalids from all parts of Canada, Hon. G. M. Weir, Provincial Minister of Education, tonight advocated revision of the British North America Act to make national health a Federal responsibility.

The minister was addressing a meeting of social agencies. British Columbia pays $685,000 a year for health costs of people who have entered the province during the past three years, Dr. Weir continued.

"I maintain that this is a Federal responsibility," he added. "It is not equitable that we should pay the entire cost."

ACT OUT OF DATE
In urging revision of the B.N.A. Act, Dr. Weir said it had been brought down by the Fathers of Confederation when Canada was largely agricultural and primitive and the constitution of the act was intended for mid-Victorian times.

Dr. Weir declared that organized action, under Federal direction, to fight "the great scourge of cancer, tuberculosis and venereal disease" was the first duty of Canada.

LAST TRACE OF PRIEST IS LOST

Hope for Father Pigeon Is Given Up as Snow Obliterates Footprints

CHURCHILL, Oct. 9 (CP).—Rapidly-disappearing footprints in the snow-covered ice along the west shore of Hudson Bay, 400 miles north of here, were believed tonight to be the last trace of Rev. Father Pigeon that would be found.

Twelve days ago, in pursuit of his duties as missionary, the thirty-seven-year-old priest of the Oblate order was lost—only six miles from the settlement of Chesterfield.

He had provisions for about a day and a sleeping bag.

UNDERTOOK TO WALK
An Eskimo mission helper was the last companion of Father Pigeon. The two were returning, by sailboat, from Rankin Inlet, which is forty-five miles south of Chesterfield. With six miles to go, Father Pigeon decided to go ashore and walk the balance of the way.

The Eskimo sailed on and arrived safely.

Father Pigeon, with the exception of a brief trip outside last year, has been stationed at Chesterfield since 1925. He is able to talk the Eskimo language fluently and the Eskimos in the region are very fond of him. The whole settlement is gripped at his disappearance. He was born at Vercheres, Que., and ordained at Ottawa.

REFUNDING LOAN ASSURED SUCCESS

Subscriptions Reach $230,000,000—No Further Announcements Until Books Are Closed

OTTAWA, Oct. 9 (CP).—Subscriptions to the $250,000,000 Dominion refunding loan have reached $230,000,000, according to computations made public late tonight. Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance, declared, "I have no doubt whatever that the loan will be substantially over-subscribed. We are already within sight of our objective."

A large proportion of today's applications were from holders of Victory Bonds in amounts of $1,000 or less.

With the loan now an assured success, the minister stated that no further totals would be announced until the books have been closed.

HISTORIC SMOKEHOUSE DESTROYED BY FIRE

HARRISON MILLS, B.C., Oct. 9 (CP).—The largest and last of the old Indian smokehouses on the banks of the Harrison River, at the Chehalis Reserve, has been destroyed by fire. Until a spark from a defective stovepipe caught in the dry moss on the roof, last Friday, the relic had withstood the elements for eighty years.

Europe Is Fearful Of Repercussions To King's Murder

International Complications Possible But Not Expected, Says Authority in London—Ruler Was Strong Force for Peace in Balkans and Loss Will Be Great There

LONDON, Oct. 9 (CP).—Great Britain, shocked at the brutal assassinations of King Alexander of Yugoslavia and Foreign Minister Louis Barthou of France, tonight hoped that the fact the assassin was one of the turbulent Croation faction in Yugoslavia would help to confine the repercussions to the slain monarch's country.

But the news brought misgivings as to the eventual outcome. King Alexander was always regarded in London as the man most responsible for bringing to the Balkans—the storm centre of Europe—a measure of stability they had not achieved in years. He worked untiringly for peace and friendship in the Balkans, and his untimely death removes a strong hand from the scene.

PARAGUAY READY TO END THE WAR
GENEVA, Oct. 9 (AP).—Paraguay demanded immediate cessation of hostilities in the Chaco War in a message to the League of Nations conciliation committee today and a special non-aggression pact with "international guarantees."

Paraguay also informed the committee it was disposed to proceed toward conciliation with the idea of reaching a direct accord with Bolivia on their differences and eventually a decision of arbitration.

St. Louis Cardinals Win Series as Dean Shuts Out Detroit

Tigers Go Down to 11-0 Defeat as One Pitcher After Another Is Blasted From Mound—Medwick Angers Crowd, Starting Near-Riot

DETROIT, Oct. 9 (AP).—Completing the spectacular saga of the Deans with a history-making climax, the great Jerome Herman ("Dizzy") Dean pitched St. Louis to the baseball championship of the world today with a record shut-out triumph, 11-0, as the Cardinal clouting crew slaughtered the pitching staff of Detroit Tigers in as wild and riotous a finish as any world series has ever witnessed.

The National League champions blasted the last defense of Mickey Cochrane's battered Bengals with a smashing seven-run attack in the third. They bombarded six pitchers all told for a total of seventeen hits, while Dizzy Dean, turning in his fourth victory for his team and family, emerged from the seventh and final game with the most lopsided series shutout margin since Christy Mathewson blanked Philadelphia Athletics, 9-0, in 1905.

RIOTOUS OUTBURST
Before the clouting Cardinals dashed off the field with the final decision, four games to three, and their third world championship in nine years, they survived a riotous outburst by the left-field bleachers as the game with the most lopsided series shutout margin since Christy Mathewson blanked Philadelphia Athletics, 9-0, in 1905.

RED REVOLT SMOLDERING

Spanish Rebels Plan "Desperate Offense"—Conservatives Remain in Power

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press)
MADRID, Oct. 9.—Spain's six-day Red revolt was a dangerous mass of embers tonight, flaring into gunfire here and there over the nation, as the Conservative Government of Premier Alejandro Lerroux remained in power at the opening of the Cortes.

Tenaciously the Socialist and Communist rebels held on in Northern Spain, rallying their forces at Oviedo, Asturias Province, and barricading themselves against attack on the city's labor district.

AWAIT REINFORCEMENTS
The army was awaiting reinforcements before attacking. A column of troops under General Eduardo Lopez Ochoa was moving into the mining district, where rebels held other strongholds.

Ochoa's forces were reported to have encountered centres where rebels slaughtered entire garrisons of civil guards, including their wives and families. More than 400 guards were said to have been killed.

The national death toll was impossible to count. It was estimated at from 500 to 1,000, with thousands of others wounded and imprisoned.

HOLDING A TRUMP
The rebels' committee of strategy in Madrid, interviewed by the Associated Press in the utmost secrecy, tonight indicated a "desperate" trump card still remaining to be played.

A revolutionary leader said a nation-wide "desperate offense" was planned at a given signal "that will launch our entire forces on the attack upon Government offices, banks and other strategic centres necessary to our cause."

FEAR PROPOSAL NOW WRECKED

Hope for French Agreement With Danubian Countries Lessened by Events

PARIS, Oct. 9 (AP).—France, which planned with great hope the visit of King Alexander, feared today that her Danubian political policy may be shattered by the double assassination of the King and Louis Barthou, French Foreign Minister.

Barthou was the master mind of the pretentious plan to reconcile Yugoslavia and Italy so that Mussolini could be drawn into a peace pact in Central Europe with the Little Entente.

Premier Gaston Doumergue presided at a hastily-called Cabinet meeting and arranged to go to Marseilles tonight with President Albert Lebrun, Edouard Herriot and Andre Tardieu.

CENSORSHIP IMPOSED
Censorship was imposed to prevent newspaper correspondents in Paris from suggesting any damaging interpretations of the assassination and thus inflaming animosities in the Balkans and elsewhere.

A proclamation, signed by Doumergue, expressing the grief of the nation, will be posted throughout France tomorrow.

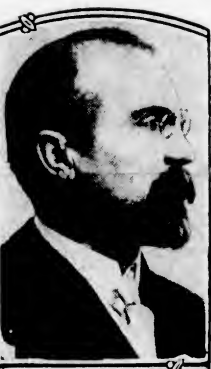

The assassination created a difficult situation for the Doumergue Cabinet at home. Barthou must be replaced as Foreign Minister. Albert Sarraut, Minister of the Interior, who, as head of all the police system of France, bore the responsibility of protecting the King, may be forced to resign. The Premier may take the Foreign Ministry temporarily, but eventually Herriot may take the office unless there is a complete change.

B.C. DELEGATES AT LUNCHEON

High Commissioner Thanks British Timber Trade for Friendly Co-operation

LONDON, Oct. 9 (CP).—Appreciation of the friendly co-operation given by the British timber trade to the Canadian lumber industry was expressed by Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Canadian High Commissioner in London, at a luncheon given today to the delegation from the British Columbia lumber industry.

The delegation is en route to South Africa, and G. W. Kierck, acting high commissioner for South Africa, told them that South Africa would like to see bigger imports of British Columbia timber.

This did not complete with South African products, he said. They would like to see ships reaching South Africa laden with British Columbia lumber, returning with South African goods.

ACTING AGENT PRESIDES
W. A. MacAdam, acting agent-general for British Columbia, presided.

Referring to the South African speech, J. H. Macdonald, chairman of the delegation, remarked that Canadians were the largest consumers of fruit in the world, per capita.

Mr. Ferguson remarked: "As Canadians, we want to spend more money here, because the more prosperous we make this country the greater will be the consuming power of the British public."

Conservatives in Saanich Elect New Officers for Year

Brian Hoole Chosen President at Enthusiastic Meeting—C. H. Dickie, M.P., Speaking on Federal Policies, Says Sound Course Followed

BRIAN Hoole was elected president of the Saanich Conservative Association last evening by acclamation, supported by a new slate of officers chosen at the annual meeting, held in the Conservative Rooms, Campbell Building. Enthusiastic tributes were paid to W. O. Wallace, retiring president, and to Mrs. F. F. Osborn, convener and retiring first vice-president, both of whom refused leading offices, but consented to remain on the executive. C. H. Dickie, M.P. for Nanaimo, addressed the gathering briefly.

EARLY CONVENTION
Saanich Conservatives also went on record as being in favor of an early convention of the party in British Columbia, and will memorialize the British Columbia Conservative Association to this effect.

W. Carr, retiring secretary-treasurer, mentioned in warm appreciations paid to outgoing officers, presented a balance sheet showing a favorable surplus for the year.

Jugoslavian Monarch and French Foreign Minister Murdered on Eve of Conferences Designed to Strengthen Peace and Security of Nations—Policeman Dies, Others Badly Wounded

Killer Uses Sub-Machine Gun—Is Cut Down by Police Sabres

BELGRADE, Oct. 9 (CP-Havas).—Eleven-year-old Crown Prince Peter of Yugoslavia was proclaimed King tonight by the Cabinet after an emergency session. The regency provided by the constitution will be elected by Parliament as soon as possible.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press)

MARSEILLES, Oct. 9.—King Alexander, of Yugoslavia, dictatorial ruler of the land where the Great War flamed twenty years ago, and Foreign Minister Louis Barthou, France's champion of peace, were shot to death by a Yugoslavian assassin five minutes after the King arrived here today.

From all the capitals of Europe came concern that the wanton slaying would unsettle the balance of peace of the continent, although no immediate danger of war was foreseen.

To the Balkan throne in Alexander's stead will come the eleven-year-old Crown Prince Peter, but upon a regency will rest the shaping of policies that may alter the makeup of the Western world.

The bullets of the thirty-five-year-old Croation assassin, political enemy of the King's dictatorship, mowed down a policeman, gravely wounded a French general riding in the official automobile with the King and the Foreign Minister, and wounded twelve others before the slayer himself was killed.

USED GERMAN GUN
The assassin, a native of Zagreb named Petrus Kalemén, was armed with a repeating pistol of sub-machine gun type, of German make, and a small bomb which he had no chance to use.

In the wild scene, General Joseph Georges, of the French Superior War Council, was shot in the abdomen. He was pronounced in a grave condition in a Marseilles hospital. Police Inspector Perrier, five other men, five women and a fourteen-year-old boy were struck by bullets. Later it was theorized that some of the shots came from weapons of the surprised police.

Two men found near the assassin were arrested, but officials of the Ministry of the Interior said they were convinced the assassin acted alone.

Catholics Go On Trial in Mexico

MEXICO, D.F., Oct. 9 (AP).—Sixteen Catholic men and women accused of plotting with priests to start a rebellion against the Government went on trial today in the second Federal District Court.

Two of the accused men admitted giving money for the purpose mentioned, but most of the others denied taking part in any conspiracy.

LEAVES SCHOOL FOR A THRONE

Crown Prince Peter of Yugoslavia Closely Guarded by English Police

COBHAM, Eng., Oct. 9 (CP).—Police tonight mounted a close guard over Sandroy School, where the eleven-year-old Crown Prince Peter of Yugoslavia broke his studies to face the throne. While the preparatory school's headmaster, W. M. Borriby, was informed immediately by telephone of the assassination at Marseilles of King Alexander, the news was not given to Peter for some time.

Accompanied by an English tutor, C. C. Parrott, the Crown Prince arrived in England only a few weeks ago. It was his first separation from the Royal Family.

The schoolboy King will ascend the Yugoslavian throne as Peter the Second.

He celebrated his eleventh birthday September 9, at Bled, Yugoslavia. He had looked forward to spending the whole day with King Alexander in father and son intimacy at the Summer residence on a beautiful lake in Slovenia. But Alexander was too busy with affairs of state to grant the day to the child.

MEMBERSHIP AT Y.M.C.A. GAINS

Eighty-four New Names Added to Roster of Institution During Campaign

Reports submitted at the second meeting of the Y.M.C.A. membership campaign, held last night, showed that eighty-four new memberships, with a total valuation of $927, have been received since the drive opened last Friday. It was also shown that forty-seven new memberships have been registered this year than last, during the same period.

MADE FOR ALL B.C.
Just now the big drive is to sell poppies and wreaths for Remembrance Day, made here in Victoria by the Red Cross Shops for all of British Columbia.

Ex-service organizations, grouped together in a Remembrance Day committee, contract for these poppies and wreaths, for sale to the public; all of the proceeds going to care of veterans and their dependents in actual need.

Thus in Greater Victoria, for twelve months from September to September, no less than 750 veterans' cases were attended to, involving 2,752 dependents. The sum of $4,260 was distributed in small amounts, after careful and thorough investigation, covering gaps left by public relief services, necessarily more perfunctory.

EUROPE FEARFUL OF REPERCUSSIONS

concerned, the outlook was obscure. But the general inclination in authoritative quarters here, outside of immediate and warm-hearted sympathy, was to reserve comment on the possibilities in the solution. It was too early yet, said most informed quarters, to estimate the ultimate effect of the assassinations either in Yugoslavia, France, or the international scene at large.

WITH BATTLE HONORS
They could, these men, talk of Ypres, the Orchard, Givenchy, the Somme, Sanctuary Wood, Vim, Passchendaele and the last Mons, of the battles that put the honors of Canada's fighting battalions on their regimental colors. They helped, and were marked in help; but they do not talk about it. Greying at the temples, a little bald on top, broken in body but undaunted in spirit, they made history. Now they, and many like them, must work to live in a world of short memories, of brittle promises, of fierce competition. The hands, long since, have ceased to play.

That is why when poppies go on sale, as they now are, in preparation for Remembrance Day, they will have been fashioned by the hands of those who have cause to remember November 11, 1918, the original Armistice Day.

Under a joint committee of all service organizations, the poppies and wreaths will be sold throughout Canada, including British Columbia. Saturday, November 10, will be Poppy Day, with street sales of the favors. Meanwhile, poppies and wreaths may be secured at the committee's headquarters, 1425 Douglas Street, telephone E 3312.

"Every person a poppy; each business house a wreath," is the objective the central committee has set itself. With the public alone rests the success of this mission.

A TRIBUTE

By R. O. HOWELL

While evening bells were calling to worship, there passed quietly home, on Sunday last, the spirit of one of Victoria's oldest and best citizens in the person of Mrs. Euphemia M. Eltheridge, widow of Ernest L. Eltheridge. For over forty years she had been the presiding genius at the Wilkinson Road home, where her genial, kindly and youthful spirit had endeared her not alone to her family, but throughout the countryside.

In that neighborhood, too, she had in those early years organized and supervised a Sunday school, which later developed into a mission church, ultimately becoming a great district centre of spiritual influence, known as Wilkinson Road United Church.

In the years which have intervened, great changes have necessarily followed in personnel of the residents, but this pioneer spirit had labored on unflinchingly, striving ever to develop, through precept and by practice, those high principles which make for righteousness.

Not emboldened upon scroll of fame, or ennobled by tongue of orator, will be the achievement of this humble, earnest, happy servant of Jesus Christ, yet methinks there were very many of the redeemed ones at the gates of the Eternal City to welcome home this child who, freed from her many physical impediments, entered into the rest which remaineth for the people of God.

In her home, and in her church, she will long be missed, but the fragrance of her beautiful life will remind those who knew her best of how great triumphs grace can achieve.

Ship Owners Facing Many Large Claims

NEW YORK, Oct. 8 (AP).—Virtually 300 notices of claims, which will total millions of dollars, have been filed against owners of the Ward Line as a result of the fire which destroyed the liner Morro Castle, with the loss of more than 130 lives.

Some claims are for as much as $500,000, but the operators are attempting to limit their total liability to $200,000, under Admiralty law,

UNEASINESS IN ITALY
ROME, Oct. 9 (AP).—Italy was profoundly shocked and dismayed by the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia and French Foreign Minister Louis Barthou at Marseille.

Premier Mussolini and Pope Pius learned the news immediately and dispatched telegrams of condolence. Official circles were hard hit because Italy's unsettled relations with Yugoslavia, and because Barthou was to have come to Rome within a few weeks to confer with Mussolini. It had been hoped this meeting would lead to a lasting Italian-French rapprochement.

Italy was greatly relieved to learn that the assassin, Petris Kalenien, was a Yugoslav; but, nevertheless, the fact he was a Croatian caused some uneasiness.

INTERNAL DISSENSION
That he was a Yugoslav was taken as lessening the chance of the assassination becoming an international incident, but it was feared the fact that he was also Croatian might produce internal dissension between Croatia and the Serbian parts of Yugoslavia.

Even when the relations between Rome and Belgrade were coldest, Italy has been friendly towards Croatia, for it is now felt that the Croatians and Serbs engaged in internecine strife, Italy might find herself in an embarrassing situation. Any idea of an Italian troop movement at this time may be considered fantastic, the Associated Press said, for a factious Italian official said they said the Government is greatly concerned, however, and attaches will remain on duty all night to keep in touch with the situation.

NO CAUSE FOR WAR
PARIS, Oct. 9 (AP).—The bullets of an assassin again have aroused fears for peace in the Balkan "powder house," twenty years after the Sarajevo slaying plunged the world into the Great War. But this time diplomats see no immediate cause for a new world war, and twenty-seven nations into the last conflict.

However, fear is expressed that the consequences of the double assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia and French Foreign Minister Louis Barthou may bring the balance and create a new reason for hatred to flame into war. Barthou's dream of assuring Europe's peace by reconciling the King with Premier Mussolini may have perished with France's seventy-two-year-old martyred Foreign Minister.

AUSTRIA IS ALARMED
VIENNA, Oct. 9 (AP).—Political circles were in turmoil today upon receipt of word of the assassination of King Alexander at Marseille. It was compared to the shots fired at Sarajevo by one Government minister, who said the European situation may be affected sharply.

The Croat leader, August Koshutich, told the Associated Press that the disorders culminating in civil war in Yugoslavia may be one result. He said the assassination was "the direct result of his assumption of the responsibility for the dictatorship."

CONFUSION IN BELGRADE
BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Oct. 9 (AP).—Stultifying confusion gripped Government offices when the news of the king's assassination reached here today. It was impossible to obtain a clear picture of prospects for the immediate future, but there was no disorder.

The news was withheld from the public until almost 10 o'clock tonight. It caused a wave of horror to circulate throughout the country. All telephone communications abroad were severed, but the country remained quiet. All flags were placed at half mast, all entertainments cancelled and all theatres closed. A thirty-day period of national mourning was proclaimed.

Troops at the Belgrade garrison were sworn in to represent the Government, which is to rule the country until a regency is appointed.

NEWS IS WITHHELD
News of the king's death, at first not permitted to reach the public. After the first confusion the Cabinet went into session. Previously, orders had been given to newspapers not to issue extras.

Although King Alexander had offended the sentiments of a great number of his democracy-loving people by establishing a dictatorship in 1929, his bravery during the war, and the fact that he was of pure Serbian ancestry never were forgotten.

MAKE ARRESTS IN SASKATOON

Police Believe Leaders Taken of Important Narcotic Ring on Prairies

SASKATOON, Oct. 9 (CP).—War against narcotic peddlers, recently waged successfully in Montreal, with the breaking of an important international dope ring, opened in Saskatchewan, today, with the arrest of two Chinese merchants, of $5,000 worth of opium. With the arrests police believed they had secured the leaders of an important ring in the Prairies. It was believed to be the largest seizure in the history of the province.

The arrests were made at Biggar, Sask., under the direction of Detective Sergeant L. J. Black, of Edmonton, in charge of the narcotics division of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in Alberta. Sergeant Black recently returned from Montreal, where he participated in the breaking of the $1,000,000 ring led by Pincus Brecher, wealthy New Yorker, who committed suicide after his conviction.

Those arrested were D. Lem, alias Dal Kwok Lue, and Fred Hewa. The men were charged with possession of opium, and this morning appeared before Provincial Magistrate J. T. Leger, in R.C.M.P. Court, where they were remanded without plea until next Tuesday.

It was intimated a further charge might be laid against Lem of carrying opium from Vancouver to the Prairies.

CAIRD AWAITING COURT RULING
Gordon Garrett, Witness in Ring Case, Tells of Buying Revolver

John Caird, charged with having a stolen ring in his possession, knowing it to have been stolen, failed to produce the memorandum book which he thought might be in existence and which would set out the details of the purchase of the jewelry which he had traded to the Pacific Gold Smelters, when the case was resumed in the city police court, yesterday, before Magistrate Jay.

He offered the explanation that he remembered cleaning a drawer in his room a little time ago and this book may have been destroyed with other papers.

The accused denied having knowledge that the ring, which had been taken from the home of L. S. V. York, had been stolen. Gordon G. Garrett, convicted of breaking and entering a dwelling for the purpose of theft, was called as a witness, also. He testified that he found the ring on Stanley Avenue, that he did not know it was stolen and that he gave it to Caird.

HISTORY OF REVOLVER
While on the stand, Garrett gave his version of the origin of the revolver which he used in connection with the escape of himself and his companion from the Uplands home that was robbed.

When questioned by C. L. Harrison, city prosecutor, with respect to the revolver, Garrett at first objected to telling of it, as he said he had already been tried and sentenced.

Finally he admitted that he got the gun in Vancouver, for fifty cents, buying it in a junk store on Main Street. He did not have the gun when he met Caird. He had never been able to get shells for the revolver.

Magistrate Jay reserved his decision until this morning.

INDICTMENT HAS TO BE AMENDED

Trial of George Hannay at Nanaimo Held Over—Fourteen Cases on Docket

NANAIMO, Oct. 9.—Only one case was proceeded with here in the Assize Court, which is being presided over by Mr. Justice Murphy, and which opened this morning. The trial of George Hannay, on several charges, was to have come up this morning, but, owing to a technicality in the indictment, the case was laid over, and that of Henry Brown, an Indian, of Clayoquot, was proceeded with. Brown was accused of a statutory charge.

After the case for the Crown, presided by Mr. Arthur Leighton, had been completed, an adjournment was made until 10:30 on Wednesday.

It is expected that the case of Rex vs. Burns will come up tomorrow. Burns is accused of breaking and entering a store in Alberni.

There are twelve criminal and two civil cases on the docket for this assize.

REV. H. R. BAKER DIES AT HOME

Funeral Services for Veteran Minister Will Be Held on Friday Afternoon

Funeral services for Rev. Hilbert Robert Baker, M.A., who passed away at his residence, 1114 Pembroke Street, yesterday, will be held Friday afternoon, the cortege proceeding from the E. J. Curry & Son Funeral Home and to the Metropolitan United Church, where Rev. E. F. Church will officiate at 2:30 o'clock. Interment will be made in the Royal Oak Burial Park.

Born on January 1, 1846, at Athol, Nova Scotia, Mr. Baker had resided here for twenty-two years. He was educated at the University of Mt. Allison, Sackville, N.B., and taught at the college for some years before completing his university degree. He was later ordained a minister of the Methodist Church of New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island.

MANY PASTORATES
He held many important pastorates in the East. Among them were Moncton, Charlottetown, St. John, Derby, Dorchester, Richibucto and various centres in Nova Scotia. He came to Victoria to become pastor of the Hampshire Road Methodist Church, which was his last charge before his retirement.

A learned preacher, he was also a deep student of history and poetry, being the author of a considerable number of poems that have found an enduring place in the literature of Eastern Canada. He was recognized as one of the authorities in Canada on Tennyson, of whose life and works he had specialized. He spent half a century in the work of the ministry and came of a very old United Empire Loyalist family, who left Virginia during the American Revolution and came to Canada. He was a member of the Victoria Ministerial Association.

He is survived by his son, Professor R. S. Baker, formerly of Toronto and now of Victoria, and by two daughters, Mrs. Butler, the wife of Rev. J. R. Butler, of Seattle, and Miss Grace Baker, of Victoria, of the board of the Oriental Home and Missionary Society.

GORGE CHANNEL REPORT ASKED

Ald. Dr. J. D. Hunter Gets Support of Council for Engineer's Survey

The Federal Department of Public Works will be asked by the City Council to request its district engineer to submit a report on the feasibility of a channel connecting the upper reaches of the Gorge with Esquimalt Harbor. The city also will ask Saanich and Esquimalt Councils to support its application. This action was taken last night on a motion by Ald. Dr. J. D. Hunter, who pointed out that he was not proposing a civic project, but merely wished to secure a report on the feasibility, with a view to suggesting that the channel be dug by the Dominion Public Works Department as an unemployment relief project.

"The idea of connecting the Gorge with Esquimalt Harbor is by no means a new one," Alderman Hunter stated. "The question was first mooted as far back as 1860, and a map dated 1876, showing a canal, is on file in the Provincial archives."

THREE ADVANTAGES

"The advantages to be gained chiefly are three in number. It would purify the Gorge waterway, which is important from a sanitation point of view. The waterway would be one of the most beautiful scenic routes in the Northwest and, I think, it would tend to increase values of properties bordering on those waters," Alderman Hunter declared.

While supporting the motion, Ald. Alex Peden took the stand that the cause of the unsanitary condition in the Gorge should be first rectified, namely, by compelling Saanich to install a sewage system. Alderman Hunter hastened to assure the alderman that efforts were being made to have Saanich install a sewage system.

GIVES ADDRESS TO BURNS CLUB

Rev. Dr. David Christie Tells Members of "The Old Home"

Scottish simplicity, enthusiasm, and the traditional Scottish love of the homeland, mingled freely at the meeting of the Victoria Burns Club in the Chamber of Commerce Auditorium, last night, and kindred spirit of "the exiles" was heightened by an eloquent address by Rev. Dr. David Christie on "The Scottish Home of Auld Lang Syne."

Dr. Christie, long away from his native heath, has never lost touch with the Old Land, and his memories of olden days remain fresh, and he told the members of the club some of the intimate things connected with Scottish life and the old Scottish home.

"THE OLD HOME"

His address revealed some of the characteristics of the people and the homes of his day, their simplicity, their love of the land, the spirit of independence, the spirit of piety and the tenderness of the Scottish heart. For each one of those characteristics he had a little story to illustrate what the Old Home held for those whom it sheltered.

His reference to the Scottish people as "exiles from their home land" was new to the members of the club, but Dr. Christie qualified his reference at the close of his address when he said: "We exiles, as I choose to call ourselves, owe a great debt to this Canada to which we have come and in which we have made our homes. The best way we can pay that debt is by reviving the old glories of the Scottish home and to try and hand over that heritage to the homes and to the children of Canada."

BUSINESS SESSION

The business session consisted of the acceptance of applications from fifty-one new members who were, by vote of the membership, formally received into the club. The Victoria Burns Club, at the commencement of the Fall and Winter season, had more paid-up members on its register than at any other time since the foundation of the club.

Secretary E. M. Whyte read a poem in memory of the late John Hogg, which was composed by Major R. Donald. He also announced that a box of heather had been received from the editor of The Weekly Scotsman, the heather having been collected by the readers of The Scotsman. It was distributed to members.

W. B. Grant gave a report of the recent meeting in Glasgow of the Federation of Burns Clubs, which was attended by J. G. Brown, representing Victoria. Mr. Brown's report was summarized by Mr. Grant. On the recommendation of the executive committee, Mr. Brown will be retained as permanent representative of the Victoria Club in Scotland when active members are not available.

MUSICAL PROGRAMME

During the evening, the members enjoyed a musical programme by the following: Solo, by Alex Marshall, Miss Catherine Denison, Mrs. Bertram Mayell, and Highland dances by Miss Owen Dewar. Pipe Major Donald Cameron, who presided at the meeting with the customary pipe selection. President W. A. Jameson was in the chair, and at the conclusion of the musical programme, introduced the members of the standing committee of the club.

KING ALEXANDER AND LOUIS BARTHOLOMEW SHOT

QUEEN STRICKEN

Queen Marie, widow of the slain king, was en route, by train, from Belgrade, and was to have met Alexander at Marseilles. As her train crossed France the news was spread that she was struck by a bullet, and became so ill a physician had to be called. Her special train was due here at dawn.

The National Secret Police announced that examination of Kalem's passport showed it had been delivered to him by the Czechoslovakian consul at Zagreb, indicating he was of Czechoslovakian nationality and not Yugoslavian. Barthou died believing his royal guest had escaped the assassin's bullets, it was revealed by surgeons who crowded around his death bed at the hospital.

ASKED FOR KING

They reported he murmured faintly, "Was the King hurt?" Wishing to spare him, they informed him the King was not hit. "I am so glad," breathed Barthou. "I am happy to know I was the only one wounded."

The Foreign Minister might have been saved but for the fact that the taxi cab in which he was taken to the hospital became blocked in a jam of traffic and was so long in getting there that Barthou bled to death from a severed artery.

The King was shot three times—in the liver, left shoulder and the left lung. He died within an hour.

Barthou was shot in the left forearm and the leg. The seventy-two-year-old diplomat died within two hours of loss of blood.

General Alois Joseph Georges, of the French Superior War Council, was shot in the abdomen, and it was not believed he could survive.

POLICEMAN DIES

A policeman named Gall, shot by Kalem, died three hours later. The tragedy stirred up great emotion in France, which had looked to the visit of the Yugoslavian monarch as a great political step, destined eventually to cement the peace of the Balkans.

Queen Marie, Alexander's consort, escaped the catastrophe only because her poor health forced her to travel by train to France, instead of by warship, as the King had done.

The King arrived in the harbor aboard the Yugoslavian cruiser Dronnik, escorted into French territorial waters by a whole fleet of the French Navy.

AMID REJOICING

A few minutes after 4 p.m., amid the deafening cheers of a huge crowd, which shouted "Vive le roi!" he went on land. Barthou bade him welcome on behalf of the French nation.

Kalem, in the midst of the great crowd in the big square before the Stock Exchange, wedged his way through the police line.

The assassin jumped on the right-hand running-board. The King's chauffeur smashed him in the face with his fist, but Kalem clung to his coat.

Kalem jerked two pistols out of his pockets and fired point blank at the King, at Barthou and at Georges.

At the same moment, Lieutenant Colonel Piollet, riding alongside, whirled his horse in an attack and cut Kalem twice with his sabre.

CONTINUED FIRING

The assassin rolled to the ground, bleeding. As he lay on the pavement he fired several more shots, which wounded spectators standing about.

Policemen cut loose with their own guns as he lay there. The police rushed in and saved him from the fury of the mob. They carried him, bleeding and dying, to a nearby newstand.

He died within two hours, in a police station, while under questioning.

The chauffeur drove the car on to the prefecture. His Majesty, the wounded King, was carried in and put down on a divan.

GREAT GRIEF

The scene tonight, at the prefecture, where the King's body lay, was one of grief, especially that the King, whom the French press called the "Knight King" and the "Soldier King," had been killed on French soil.

His Majesty was attended at his death by several military surgeons and four local doctors who were hastily called, but they could only report his condition to be hopeless. Guarding him in the death watch were two French Guards Mousles, with drawn sabres. The flickering light of two small candles glinted on their blades.

Barthou died in the Hospital Hotel Dieu. Three physicians were in attendance as he died. There were those who said that the shock of Alexander's assassination, ending as it did one of Barthou's fondest dreams for peace, had a great deal to do with the statesman's death.

Barthou was able only to mumble as he died, and his last words were: "I am suffering. I am thirsty."

SINGLE ASSASSIN

The preliminary police investigation disclosed only that Kalem had been involved alone in the shooting. What brief questioning the police were able to conduct brought nothing from him. They discovered, however, from his passport, that he was thirty-five, and a Croat.

Tonight, President Albert Lebrun himself was on the way from Paris to pay his last honor to his veteran right-hand man, Barthou, and to the friend of France, King Alexander.

On examination, police found one weapon used by the assassin was a small sub-machine gun of a new model.

Descriptions of the man Petrus Kalem varied. All agreed he was large. Police gave out the following information: That he was a Croat merchant, born December 20, 1899, and carried a passport issued May 30, 1934, at Zagreb. He entered France, September 28, by way of Vallorbe.

He was not on the list of suspects sent by the Yugoslavian police to French officials prior to the arrival of the King.

SECOND SON OF PRINCE

Alexander I, born the second son of an exiled prince of Serbia, became by dint of successive wars first the regent, and then monarch of the greatest South Slav state in history, the modern kingdom of Yugoslavia.

Created first as "the kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes," the kingdom's title was changed by Alexander on October 3, 1928, to conform to his programme of wiping out centuries-old racial antagonisms among the various branches of the South Slavs, and knitting them together under a new national consciousness. It proved a prolonged and troublesome task.

After struggling for eight years with political parties whose quarrels culminated in a shooting affray on the floor of Parliament, the King on January 6, 1929, proclaimed himself dictator, clapped on a strict censorship, abolished all political parties, wiped out the ancient provinces, and divided the country into nine "banats" and the Federal diet of Belgrade. A new constitution, put into effect by decree, September 3, 1931, restored a parliamentary form of government, but concentrated executive powers in the monarch.

ENCOUNTERS DIFFICULTIES

In the international field the new kingdom encountered difficulties with its neighbors—Italy, Albania, Bulgaria and Austria—over frontier questions, the rights of alien residents and activities of subversive Yugoslavians across the borders.

The brighter side of this picture was found in the Little Entente, an alliance of Yugoslavia, Rumania and Czechoslovakia, backed by France and pledged to perpetuation of the international boundaries established by the post-war treaties. From this political background the monarch developed a considerable measure of economic unity and Alexander played his part in both fields.

BRILLIANT SPEAKER

He was one of the most brilliant speakers in the republic and also one of the nation's leading historians and literary critics.

All Europe knew the dynamic diplomat. He was no stranger to King Alexander, who died with him from the assassin's bullet in Marseilles. During his visits to Belgrade he talked often with the Yugoslav King and dictator.

Barthou's father, a hard-working merchant, could not afford to send his ambitious young son to Paris for an education, so Barthou studied at home until he was able to hang out his own shingle, proudly, at the city of Pau, near his home.

But political life was his ambition, and into political life he went when he was twenty-seven years old, as a member of the Chamber of Deputies. After that the name of Barthou became national property.

"No matter if he is with us or against us, he must be in the Government. Barthou in may be difficult."

MILLION ACRES OF LAND BOUGHT

U.S. Government Pays Money to Work by Purchase of Sub-Marginal Farms

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9 (AP).—Purchase by the United States Government of 1,000,000 acres of sub-marginal farm land, from which whole families have been or will be transplanted, was reported today by Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator.

Federal buyers now are contracting for still more of the same type of arid or worn-out farm land. It will be turned into parks, forests, game preserves and Indian reservations. Most of the purchasing so far has been in the middle and far west and the southeast.

Hopkins said that $25,000,000 of public works money, allotted for retirement of sub-marginal farm lands, had been put to work.

FEAR DEATH OF TWENTY MINERS

Trapped by Fire in Iron Mine Connected With Chemical Works in France

SAINT PIERRE LA PALUD, France, Oct. 9 (AP).—A score of workers were feared killed today by a fire at the bottom of an iron pyrites mine connected with the Saint Gobain chemical works.

Three of the dead workers were brought to the surface by the first rescue squad to enter the workings.

The men trapped were on the small night shift and they were caught by a fire which broke out early in the morning.

MURDERS AT MARSEILLES

When the States of Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia were formed there was a prospect that the era of "troubles in the Balkans" was at an end. The hope has been belied by threats that have arisen since the re-alignment of frontiers in the Near East, and the greatest of all those threats has arisen through the assassination of King Alexander at Marseilles yesterday. With him fell, mortally wounded by the bullets of two murderers, M. Louis Barthou, Foreign Minister of France, who was welcoming the head of the Yugoslavian State on his way to Paris for a conference with the French Government.

If passions were not so much on edge in Europe, and particularly so by legacy during so many years in the Balkans, the tragic act of irrefragable regret everywhere. In Yugoslavia, however, the assassination will be regarded as having profound political significance. The repercussions of reactions to the event there may well be felt in all the capitals of Europe. The attack seems to have been concentrated on the King, but to make certain of his death so many bullets were fired that two other victims were claimed, and yet another may die. The assassins have been captured and will doubtless meet with summary justice.

King Alexander was both statesman and soldier. During his reign he had been repeatedly the target of assassins who have finally accomplished their fell purpose. His task during his reign was to unravel the differences which prevailed among the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes who comprise the population of the State. That task was marked by highly-strung political differences, by troubles that seemed ineradicable and by international difficulties. King Alexander, stuck to the task with firmness and decision. He was well loved except by the recalcitrant elements. His home life was beyond reproach, and he had qualities of leadership above those of the majority of present-day heads of States. His death may well throw Yugoslavia into confusion and lead to something resembling civil war. It may conceivably lead to the accentuation of differences between Italy and France over the future of that portion of the Balkans which fringes on Italian territory. Both Austria and Czechoslovakia are intimately connected with the future of Yugoslavia, a future rendered all the more insecure because Prince Peter, the heir to the throne, is still in his minority. Stern measures will be needed to keep the peace in that portion of Europe following the crime at Marseilles.

The death of M. Louis Barthou deprives France of one of her foremost statesmen, and the Cabinet of that country of perhaps its strongest personality. M. Barthou had a long and successful political career. As Foreign Minister he had been power at the Geneva conversations and a pillar of strength in the preservation of peace. The political significance in his death is the loss his passing is to France. The bullets were not specifically intended for him. The assassins, in their desire to slay King Alexander, seemingly did not care what other victims fell. The whole affair, with its poignantly saddening influences, affords a renewed illustration of how politics may drive men mad. There is no doubt of the madness of any individuals who can perpetrate such a crime as that which shocked the world yesterday.

SOVIET EXPLANATIONS

Russia's own explanation of her desire to become a member of the League of Nations is naturally of interest since to many Natives have been imputed to that country. The claim made by the Soviet press is that the League has recently improved and in some measure has demonstrated itself to be an instrument of peace, "whereas formerly it was an organization for oppression having, inter alia, hostile aims against the U.S.S.R." The newspapers of Russia claim that their country has now emerged from a period of great difficulties, is victorious and "with an invincible Red Army is able to defend itself against all comers." Further comment is that since the exit of Germany and Japan from the League its remaining members are temporarily more peaceably minded. Russia considers that notwithstanding the League's many deficiencies, arising from the character of its members, the Soviet Government can further the cause of peace there. These are the reasons advanced for accepting the invitation to join.

Investia declares that the Soviet Government's decision will be welcomed, "but that it must not be forgotten for a single moment that peace depends largely on the strength of the U.S.S.R. and the Red Army. The interests of peace require that both must be maintained as strong as possible." For the first time any negotiations there may be on the future of disarmament must take into consideration the Red Army of Russia. If the viewpoint of the Russian press is any criterion that army is to be maintained in its present strength.

PROBLEMS OF LIBRARIANS

In the intellectual currency of the library what is the rate of exchange between light reading and that of a more serious character? That is the librarian's problem, and some instructive comment on it has come from Mr. L. Stanley Jast, a former city librarian of Manchester, in speaking to the Library Association Conference at London. The problem is one all over the world where public libraries exist. There has been a growing tendency to believe that certain classes of libraries should cater only to books that "go," to books that attain an ephemeral popularity, and that more scholarly books can be left to the larger libraries which can better afford to provide those for which the demand is comparatively small. Mr. Jast does not agree with this viewpoint. His conception is that the purpose of public libraries should be to get people into them, if necessary to borrow the "short and merries" in the hope that ultimately their taste will be turned to books that really matter.

It is a fact, probably applying to all public libraries, that the "dope-reader" is in high demand. The value of the library is in the number of books, or 100 to 1. The librarian's problem, therefore, is whether to cater for numbers or for quality or for both. What the library aims at is to raise the standard of the pleasures it provides. It keeps sufficient light books to suit the taste of every man. More and more, however, with growing appreciation of literature, its shelves are becoming populated by good books. As The Manchester Guardian says, "the great stream of education and culture has long burst the banks of class and spread over the whole population. It will never be confined again, and there is no reason to suppose that these springs will dry up at the source."

This question of the library problem interests readers everywhere. The librarian himself, or herself, may not be the best judge of what is best in literature. There is the problem, too, of the extent to which the public should be amused at the expense of the ratepayers. The best advice of all seems to be that the libraries should be guided by the ideal of the best in every class of reading. "It," says The London Morning Post, "the librarian is encouraged to proceed along these lines, he will often make mistakes, but he will at least have a purpose and set a standard in life. He will be a taster and a critic and not a universal provider. He will give what is not easy to obtain; he will play his part in forming good habits of reading, and may convince the reader that the best (of its own kind) is also the most delightful."

GREAT BRITAIN AND ISOLATION

It is said that public opinion in Great Britain is consolidating in favor of isolation from European disputes and that were it not for participation in the League of Nations, Great Britain would be pursuing her own path and concentrating on her internal development. The arguments in favor of isolation are undoubtedly strong; so, however, are arguments on projects for the promotion of international amity. There are some newspapers in Great Britain, and notably The Daily Express, which urge isolation, because every day there is evidence of blood-feuds and bitter hatreds among continental nations. That paper says it is becoming more and more an insistent duty for the British Government to disentangle the British people from foreign quarrels. The Express asks that Government to put itself in tune with the will of the people.

It is admitted in Great Britain that peace is the goal. That goal, it is maintained, can be reached in a straightforward and simple way by letting Europe alone and being so armed that Europe will let her alone. Moreover, there is a belief in Great Britain that if an alliance is necessary for self-preservation, the only logical one is with France. The London Evening News takes this viewpoint and says: "Let us not try to stand with one foot in Geneva and the other ready to come down on any spot that seems to make for temporary stability." Common sense dictates the belief that international conversations looking towards disarmament have to a great degree failed. The preoccupations in this particular have diverted attention from national matters in different countries. Great Britain is getting uneasy, if the press reflects public opinion. A growing number of her people are getting tired of foreign entanglements, and this attitude is more than likely to gather strength as time elapses.

A SUNSET

The sun goes down—a stately pageant played for the sun's sake; yet, so pleasant him, We, too, may watch! Lo where the great orb lies Half-vellied in purple cloud, imperial. Now, now he comes, and for a moment shows A face unclouded, flooding all the vale. With sudden glory; then, declining slow, Like one that hath a long day's toil o'erseen, And, seeing, can command, he bids farewell, Leaving a darkened world unwillingly. And passed from our eyes, yet, passing, throws A final splendor to the zenith, where Prall bars of cloud, retaining his last gold, Linger—a gracious memory of today, A foretaste of tomorrow.

—C. H., in "Everyman."

All men naturally hate one another. I hold it a fact that if men knew exactly what on, says of the other, there would not be four friends in the world.

Note and Comment

By R. B. D.

Thus we play with the time, and the spirit of the wise sits in the clouds and such as—Shakespeare.

There is an abundance of news going around the world these days, most of it serious, and what is left alarming. The Spaniards are killing one another again, believing they have found out that a republican form of government is no more to be desired than that of a monarchial form of government. The people of Spain are like the people of other countries which need not be named: they do not appear to be quite sure what kind of government they want; they may not have had sufficient experience in politics to have found out that it is not forms of government, but methods of administration by government that matters.

Have you read the latest news from Ireland? If you haven't, the very latest news from that lovely but turbulent country are being formed there probably out of the fragments of several other political parties. Ireland is probably the very last country in the world which might be expected to go to, or even to tolerate, a thought of Communism. Yet one of the leaders of Ireland's many political parties is said to be organizing a Communist party as the only remaining hope for the political and economic salvation of his most distressed country. As no true Irishman ever was known to refuse a challenge to fight either with a sword or with a gun, another Irish leader is forming a Fascist political party. In Ireland the followers of adherents of political parties are now known by the shirts they wear. The Blue Shirts are already formed in political battle array, and we suppose the Fascists will wear black shirts and the Communists red shirts. Strange to say, there do not appear to be as yet any green shirts in the place where green once was the favorite national color. Modern Ireland seems destined to have as many political leaders as ancient Ireland had kings.

If Britain is concerned about the state of Ireland, other nations are troubled about the conditions in Spain. The statesmen of France are more directly interested in the Spanish revolution than the men in charge of the affairs of the other nations. France has gone red more than once, and the people of France are especially susceptible to the political diseases which afflict their neighbors. When nations elect to fight one another, that is bad enough; when the people of nations in spasms of passion begin to kill one another in the name of patriotism, that is worse. In civil wars the League of Nations has no authority for intervention even if it had the forces with which to intervene.

Some of the home news has been as interesting if not so serious as the foreign news. The most interesting news about home is that foreign speculators have been tampering with our wheat market through the agency of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange. We remember commenting upon some statements of Sir Joseph Stamp after he had completed his commission to investigate the methods under which business was conducted upon the Winnipeg Exchange. We believe it was that eminent British economist who lucidly explained all the technical mysteries of futures and hedgings, and declared that such dealings and speculations were necessary for the purpose of stabilizing the market. Our belief is that about all the average Canadian knows about futures is that they are intangibles which are bought and sold, and that under certain conditions a profit or a loss may be made by buying and selling them, a profit being made by those who are "on the inside" and a loss incurred by those "on the outside." Hedgers are raised purely for protective purposes.

On these matters our knowledge is very hazy. But we remember after reading the views of the commission asking what the effect would be if the exchanges were closed for a time if not permanently. Well, the news is that the government, on the advice of Mr. J. I. McFarland, the agent it appointed for the purpose of looking after the interests of the wheat growers, had considered the question of closing the Winnipeg Exchange for a time for the purpose of circumventing the designs of a gang of foreign conspirators or speculators who were engaged in a raid upon prices which would have cost this country many millions of dollars and involved thousands of people in ruin.

There are many people in British Columbia interested in the wheat markets. Readers of the market reports and quotations will remember that a few days ago there were quite unexpected and incomprehensible slumps in wheat prices. There was a suspicion that if the market had been permitted to follow its normal course based upon the year's crop and the viable supply in store.

prices should have risen, not fallen. The news is that the conspiracy was detected in time and the schemes of the raiders frustrated through the prompt action of Mr. McFarland, with the support of the government. The current wheat market is known as a seller's market. The raiders designed to make it a buyers' market and have the sellers at their mercy. There will be more news about that sensational conspiracy to defraud the people of Canada. The facts as to where the plan originated have not been revealed, but they should be exposed.

"THE PRICE OF LIBERTY"

Sir,—Mr. Walter Inward either read my letter very hastily or, more probably, was led by his sympathies into a complete misinterpretation of it.

I referred specifically to civic "employees." By substituting for "employees" the phrase "applicants for civic employment," Mr. Inward raises a set of questions quite irrelevant to the case. These questions I do not feel called upon to discuss.

PORTAGE INLET CANAL

Sir,—Just a word of warning to Alderman Dr. J. D. Hunter and those advocates of the canal.

First, Portage Inlet, at low tide, has about one-half of its acreage barely covered with water.

Secondly, the drop from high to low, at the inlet, is between five and six feet, whereas, at Esquimalt, it is between ten and eleven feet. What is going to happen when your canal is through and we get another five-foot drop? Probably you will say, well, we will dredge it out.

To my mind the scheme is too costly when a situation like this could be remedied so much cheaper if it really does exist; namely, a lock across the river would stop any foul matter coming up from the mills or from wherever it is supposed to come, and would maintain a fixed level, which would keep the mud completely covered.

European countries have used this method for centuries for getting rid of the same difficulty. I think lots more help could be given to the unemployed by building sea bathing pools at our favorite beaches.

GEO. S. SHARP,

TRAFFIC SIGNALS

Sir,—Re above, I should be false to my own conscience if I did not approve the use of such devices, having been, for more than twenty years, a signalman on the G.W. Railway, in England. In my years of experience, I have seen the value of signals and always predicted their use when cars became so numerous. My first introduction to them was in Seattle, when a policeman, as someone, called to my notice the signal, as I was about to cross the road.

I had a paper from my home town, Shrewsbury, England, some time ago, and was surprised to see, and find it installed there, and even on the outside parts of the city, one or two places, like Victoria West or Oak Bay.

Another thing I noticed in that paper was that the unemployed were engaged making roads on the old racetrack that they were going to build on, so they evidently have got the unemployed troubles there settled out in spite of this were not deterred in adopting these devices.

By the way, I have been told of late course many a time, until the races were done away with, the reason they gave for their abolition at that time was that, in addition to cleaning the city up of its loaves, cash each year, they brought in all the riff raff and bob-tail element, pick pockets, etc., many of whom remained in the city for weeks after.

Eventually, one year a lot of Birmingham lions, as they called them, with knuckle dusters on, got up in the best parts of the grandstand, by paying the fee, and that time cleaned up the lot and stole their money, many of the country guests also being among them. Benches and stools were flying, and a free-for-all took place. Next year they brought in a draft of Birmingham police, who knew some of these lions, and some of the mounted police had cutlasses. However, the races were done away with shortly after.

Well, about the expense of this equipment for signals, I cannot see for the life of me where $5,000 or $6,000 comes in for such a device. Could not some of our local electricians install something of the sort without infringing on the patent? If a firm is asking a ridiculous price for what amounts to a necessary life-saving device today, then the Government should revoke its patent rights in this country when the people are not able to pay it. Or, are we to go along and carry on just to pamper cannibals?

In the old way and be told later, like Mr. Roosevelt told the people in the United States last week, that we are ten years behind the Old Country in adopting certain things. It would be interesting to inquire over there the cost of such devices, and their installation. I know people there would not be led, at any rate.

J. MULLARD,

DEAN INGE

Sir,—My own perception of the much-advertised gloominess of Dean Inge is that it does not exist. His books make some of the greatest contributions to the thought of our day. His book on the Christian mystics reveal him, in some cases, a greater mystic than those he surveys. His profound thought opens up a new conception of life which meets the demands of the modern mind and at the same time does a fuller justice to the Christian character than the old theories of casuistry have done.

He hates, with all his intense soldier soul, all liars and all Kents, he feels that, truth in all things, means beauty and goodness, and that nothing can ever justify its surrender or betrayal.

Curious as it may seem his hate is his great love for humanity, but he dare not compromise. Unlike Forster, who is not troubled on the question of truth, so stands established on its essential principle. For him, "authority" is not an issue of definition, it is clean cut, so he chooses the intellectual of authority. He'll admit in his subsidiary and proper degree the authority of dogma. But Dr. Inge recognizes that the fixed set of doctrines, with mechanically settled problems, is invariably shifting its basis and drifting away from the intellectual.

Being a lover of truth he prefers the intelligence's purer reach to God.

CHRISTMAS HAMPER FUND

Sir,—An report of the Friendly Help Welfare Association, 1933-34, reference is made to the 1,100 hampers distributed last Christmas. It should be pointed out that this work was undertaken and carried out and all funds raised by a committee of men and women almost entirely independent of the Friendly Help Welfare Association. The above association played an almost negligible part, although they were allowed to take over the finances and pay the bills after the money had been collected.

As the same procedure may have to be followed again this Christmas, it seems in order to advise the public that they may once again be called upon to make donations to the Christmas fund entirely apart from the annual drive for funds for the general welfare purposes.

FOUR RECORDS
BY BIG MARGINS

Manager of Cardinals Has Played in Fifty World Series Games—Deans Play Big Part—Win All Games

DETROIT, Oct. 9 (AP).—The Cardinals did more than "hold that tiger." They slaughtered him on the final day. Their aim was so perfect that they scored seventeen hits.

The series proved conclusively that the Dean brothers are some ball team. Together they won forty-nine victories in the dizzy Cardinal pennant drive—Dizzy winning thirty and Paul bagging nineteen—and all four victories in the world series. The Tigers earned only seven runs off Dizzy and Duffy in forty-four innings.

"Ducky" Medwick, of the Cards, and Charley Gehring, of the Tigers, were the batting champions of the series, each collecting eleven hits in twenty-nine times at bat. Rip Collins got eleven out of thirty and Pepper Martin eleven out of thirty-one. The series record for hits is twelve.

The Cardinals set a record for most times at bat for one time in a seven-game series, going up 262 times. The previous record, established by the Giants in 1924, was 253. The shutout plastered on the Tigers by Dizzy Dean today, 11-0, also was the worst in series history.

Manager Frisch now holds four world series records by wide margins. They are: Most world series games, fifty; most hits, fifty-eight; most times at bat, 197; and most singles, forty-five. He also has played in eight world series, landing on the world championship team four times.

ASSESSMENTS ARE REDUCED

Thirty-Seven Appeals Heard by Civic Body Out of Total of Forty-Seven Cases

Thirty-seven appeals out of a total of forty-seven that were filed against assessments on land and improvements had been considered by the City's Court of Revision on Assessments when it rose yesterday afternoon to probably complete its work at another session to be held this morning at 10 o'clock.

So far no reductions have been made in land assessments, but downward revisions, amounting in all to approximately $6,000, have been granted.

In the majority of cases the recommendation of the assessor, George Okell, was taken, inasmuch as he and Arthur Danby, assistant assessor, had visited the properties described in each appeal, and considered them on their merits. In a few instances the assessment was left unchanged, but in the majority of cases the assessor recommended reductions varying from $200 to $500.

So far there has been no necessity for personal visits to property outside of those made by the assessor and assistant assessor. However, if visits by members of the court should be necessary, these appeals will be left to the last.

Legion Head Appeals for Veterans' "Square Deal"

General Alex Ross Tells Public Gathering About March Convention of Canadian Ex-Service Men's Body—Colonel W. W. Foster Speaks

An appeal for a "square deal" for returned veterans, particularly those who were disabled, in their fight for re-establishment and employment in the years of depression, was, last night, issued by General Alexander Ross, Dominion president of the Canadian Legion, in addressing some 400 persons in the City Temple auditorium. Prior to the meeting, he was the dinner guest of the District Council in Spencer's dining-room.

General Ross will leave today aboard the Aorangi for Australia, where he will attend sessions of the British Empire Service League, as well as representing Canada at ceremonies in the State of Victoria and at the unveiling of the great Australian War Memorial.

IN FINE CONDITION
General Ross referred to the excellent condition, financially, in which the Canadian Legion found itself at the March Dominion convention in Ottawa. "We have safely weathered the financial blizzard which has hit this and other countries," he stated.

High quality of debate, restraint and absolute confidence in the people of Canada, the cause they represented and themselves, were outstanding features of the gathering, he said. The only mass demonstration was the march of 2,000 veterans to the memorial in Ottawa to honor the Canadian dead.

PENSION CONSIDERATION
The most important factor at the convention was consideration of pensions. By dint of careful and sincere work with the Dominion Cabinet, the Legion was able to secure a change in the administration of pensions for war disabled veterans. General Ross explained that the Legion had been supported in its claims by the Amputees' Association, the Canadian Pensioners' Association, the Canadian Soldiers' and the Blind Sailors' and Soldiers' Association.

The great problem facing the Legion today, General Ross continued, was the re-employment of many veterans disabled through war service who had not worked for three or more years and who were unable to cope with the youth in securing posts. "Let us not forget the old soldier," he declared.

"SQUARE DEAL" SOUGHT
"In asking for a square deal for the returned men, we are not suggesting that there is anything wrong with their treatment, but we must look with an eye to the future, when the reins of authority will be in the hands of today's youth. The war and all its horrors to them will be hearsay," stated the general.

There was no solution in sight for this problem, General Ross stated. In his address, Colonel W. W. Foster, Dominion first vice-president of the Legion, explained the service bureau maintained by the Legion for service to members and those not connected with the Legion.

The service bureau (90 per cent of those who benefit from this are not Legion members) costs $37,000 for three years. A grant of $27,000 was received from the Dominion Government. This did not in any way obligate the Legion to the Government, Colonel Foster declared.

The Legion was now divided into two sections, one for the maintenance of the Legion and the other for the service bureau.

W. G. Stone, president of the District Council, presided.

HEAT SETS NEW OCTOBER RECORD
Vancouver Registers 77 Degrees—Summer Weather Extends to Albertan Foothills

VANCOUVER, Oct. 9 (CP).—Even the weather-forecasting bushrangers of the Cariboo would have been fooled and have taken a day off from their Winter-storing chores today if they had been in Vancouver when the thermometer mounted to 77 degrees, a new all-time high record for October.

E. B. Shearman, Dominion meteorologist here, announced that the previous high temperature for October was 73.9 degrees, recorded on October 16, 1929. Kamloops today reported 84.

CALGARY, Oct. 9 (CP).—Foothills citizens mopped their brows and talked about Summer today, but they didn't think of records until Vancouver reported an October high of 77. Then they quickly thumbed statistics and found that only last year the temperature here on October 7 was 85. And they weren't surprised when they found today's high was 75. Warm enough, said they.

Hymns sung were "Abide With Me" and "My Faith Looks Up to Thee." The casket was conveyed on a gun carriage from the church to the Naval Cemetery, Esquimalt, where interment took place. Bugler R. PUBLIC SUPPORTS SAFETY CAMPAIGN

Citizens Give Police Splendid Co-operation—Traffic Code Is Explained

Victorians showed their readiness to co-operate with the city police department yesterday, when the "Safety Week" campaign began. Under the personal supervision of Chief Thomas Heatley and Inspector John T. Boulton, constables gave demonstrations of proper driving methods and correct hand signals. They also showed pedestrians the danger of offences such as jay-walking and walking into the street from behind a parked car. In addition, placards giving pointers were prominently displayed at the intersections of Douglas and Yates Streets and Blanshard and Yates Streets.

Automobile brakes were also tested by Sergeant Benjamin Acreman, assisted by a constable. A general inspection of automobiles was made by Sergeant Acreman as he tested the brakes. Many motorists were given advice regarding their cars and told of the need for certain accessories.

LECTURES IN SCHOOLS
Sergeant Arthur Bishop and Constable George Clayards visited a number of city schools and lectured on safety first.

Demonstrations will continue throughout the campaign between the hours of 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. Chief Heatley, last night, explained that much confusion was still occurring in the downtown area due to some motorists falling to drive in the middle lane of traffic when anticipating a left-hand turn. Often drivers, who intend making a left-hand turn, drive close to the curb, and when the intersection is reached, they find it necessary to cut directly in front of traffic lanes. The chief urges those who offend in this manner to correct the fault.

BOY POLICEMEN ARE SUGGESTED

Patrol of Intersections to Minimize Traffic Hazards Near Schools Recommended

Boy policemen to patrol intersections near schools, so as to minimize traffic hazards while children are going to and from school, will be recommended to the police commission by the City Council.

This action was taken last night when attention was called by Harry G. Means, to the traffic danger that existed on Ormond Street, near the Boys' Central School, and on Fernwood Road, near the Girls' Central School.

Alderman James Adam pointed out that boy police systems were in vogue in United States cities, and the results were most satisfactory.

could look elsewhere for employment.

Despite his contention, however, the motion carried. Alderman Peden asked to have his dissenting vote recorded.

Change in Relief Policy Is Opposed

Alderman Alex Peden vigorously protested, at last night's meeting of the City Council, a motion to raise single men's relief to $3 a day. He claimed that if this were done for single men, then married men, who had far more responsibilities, would feel entitled to similar treatment.

He admitted that under the proposal, single men would not receive any increase in their monthly allowance, but merely work less days a week, which they received. However, he pointed out that if this privilege were extended to single men, then married men, too, should be granted a shorter period in which to work for their relief allowance, thus extending the time in which they COLOMBO, Ceylon, Oct. 9 (CP-Havas).—A plot to overthrow the recently-instituted Constitution of the Maldives Islands, 400 miles southwest of here, was brought to light today in a formal statement by the sultan of the British dependency.

No. 1 of a series of advertisements associating the development of Canada with the progress of this bank since its foundation in 1874.

IMPERIAL BANK OF CANADA

HEAD OFFICE - TORONTO
BRANCHES THROUGHOUT CANADA

When the C.P.R. went through

The history of Canada's development as a nation extending from sea to sea began with the construction of the C.P.R. Men of vision—Macdonald, Tupper, Stephen, Smith, Van Horne and their associates—inspired by heroic faith, built a railway across 3,000 miles of wilderness, opened the prairie West to settlement and connected British Columbia to her sister provinces by hands of steel. In November, 1885, Donald A. Smith (Lord Strathcona) drove the last spike.

In 1874, however, only two small isolated western sections of the road had been built. Capital for business and construction was lacking. Many banking projects arose to supply the need, and one of these was the Imperial Bank of Canada.

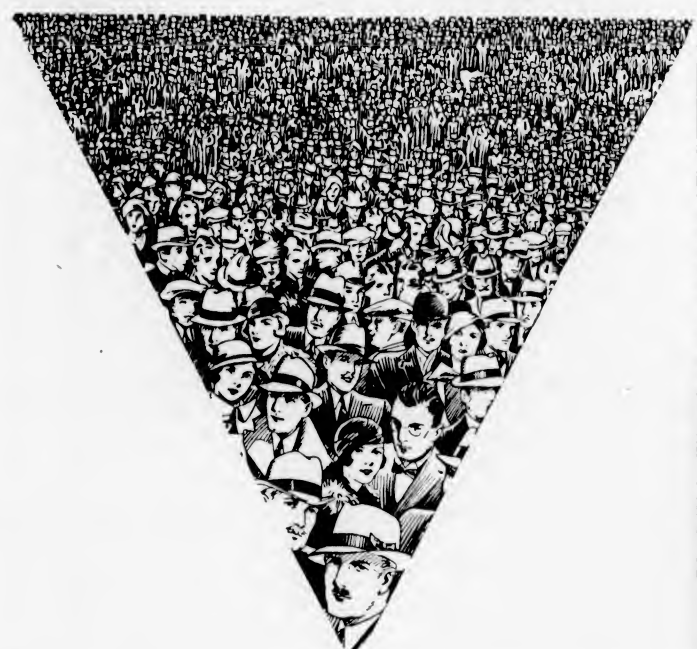

The organization of this bank was completed by Henry S. Howland in 1874 and the Head Office was opened in Toronto early the following year. Branches in St. Catharines, Ingersoll and Port Colborne came through purchase of the Niagara District Bank, and branches at St. Thomas, Woodstock and Fergus were soon added. In 1881 the bank preceded the C.P.R. into Winnipeg, and opened an office in Brandon the year following.

A severe depression fell upon the country in 1883, but all branches of the Imperial Bank were maintained and the statement for 1884 shows dividends of 8% paid on capital of $1,500,000. Assets amounted to $6,500,000.

WAS NOT "SIR JOHN"

LONDON. — "Thank you, Sir John," said press cameramen at Waterloo Station after barraging their cameras on a tall man with features notably like those of Sir John Reith, director-general of the British Broadcasting Corporation. He replied: "It's very kind of you, but I don't happen to be Sir John."

SCHOOL BOARD WINS APPEAL

Vancouver Trustees Exonerated of Liabilities for Injured Boy

VANCOUVER, Oct. 9 (CP).—The Vancouver Board of School Trustees has been exonerated by the British Columbia Court of Appeal for liability for injuries suffered by a fourteen-year-old Augustus Hugh Ritchie. The board's appeal from an $8,000 judgment in favor of the boy was allowed today.

Ex-Mayor R. H. Gale was a co-defendant and also an appellant. The outcome of his appeal is not clear. Chief Justice J. A. Macdonald allowed Mr. Gale's appeal from the $8,000 award, so did Mr. Justice W. G. McQuarrie. Mr. Justice M. A. Macdonald would hold Mr. Gale liable to the extent of 50 per cent. Mr. Justice A. Martin explained that he had the matter still under consideration. Mr. Justice A. E. McPhillips did not take part in the appeal.

OUTCOME NOT CERTAIN

As the case now stands, if Mr. Justice Martin were to dismiss Mr. Gale's appeal, then he would have the $8,000 judgment reduced to $4,000. If he should allow it, the action against Mr. Gale would be dismissed.

Mr. Justice Martin's judgment will not affect the majority decision which determined the school board's appeal. The damages had been awarded Ritchie, by a jury, for injuries he suffered on the Point Grey Junior High School grounds on June 21, 1933, when his left foot was crushed by an automobile owned by Mr. Gale and driven by his son, Robert, aged sixteen.

NEGLIGENCE IS FOUND

The jury found that Mr. Gale had entrusted the car to his son within the meaning of the Motor Vehicle Act. The jury also found that the driver of the car was negligent and that the school board was negligent in connection with their supervision and control of the school grounds.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9 (AP).—Barney Ross, lightweight champion, relaxing at his Chicago home, informed the New York Boxing Commission, today, that he is ready to meet Tony Canzonieri in a fight for the lightweight title, as soon as satisfactory financial arrangements can be worked out.

Canzonieri filed a challenge and a forfeit cheque of $2,500 with the commission two months ago and Ross was ordered to accept within sixty days. The time limit expired last Saturday. Ross was not suspended, however, because the commission had information that he was ready to go ahead with the bout as soon as a promoter could be found.

"You say your son was cured of his wildness by an operation?" asked the great surgeon. "Yes, that's what I said," replied the wealthy man. "That's interesting; what was the operation?" demanded the surgeon. "I cut off his allowance and made him go to work," said the wealthy man.

NEW, STRONGER "STRAIN" of Yeast, discovered in great medical college, rich in hormone-like* substances... speeds digestive juices, muscles. (New Vitamin A combats colds!)

1. Just how is this new yeast different from the former Fleischmann's Yeast? It's a totally new type of fresh yeast—an entirely new "strain." Far stronger. It acts more vigorously inside your body... much faster!
2. How was it discovered... by whom? By a famous bacteriologist in a great medical college, who had been studying yeast for years! He was literally astonished by the far quicker action of this new yeast.
3. How do Physicians explain it? As doctors now know, the chief reason most people get constipated, have stomach troubles and related ills is—their digestive juices and muscles have slowed up! *This new, "XR" Yeast (that's the scientists' name for it) is exceedingly rich in hormone-like substances ("activators") which speed up these juices and muscles all through your digestive system amazingly!
4. Why does it correct Constipation and Indigestion so much faster? Because it makes your digestive juices flow faster and muscles work harder all the way from the stomach on down! Food is more quickly softened, digested, passed along and out of your body. You soon can eat things you couldn't eat before—without experiencing that "stuffed" feeling, indigestion or constipation. Isn't that better than harsh cathartics? "XR" Yeast actually "normalizes" you.
5. Does the Skin clear quicker? Yes! Skin troubles (usually) come from poisons that aren't thrown off by the intestines. "XR" Yeast corrects this self-poisoning—makes your blood purer—skin healthier. Pimples, boils, etc., should soon clear up.
6. Will "Run-down" feeling go? Usually! Patients often feel better almost at once! You should start immediately to get more "good" from your food—have fewer headaches—better appetite—much more vigor. After 40, especially, people need "XR" Yeast to correct the slowing of digestive secretions occurring rapidly after that age. It also helps in many cases of rheumatism, by correcting an often related ill—auto-intoxication in the body.
7. Will it help reduce Colds? Yes—by "cleansing" your system and supplying newly-added "infection-preventing" Vitamin A. Fleischmann's "XR" Yeast is also rich in Vitamins B, D and G—four vitamins we all need!

EAT 2 CAKES EVERY DAY!

...plain, or dissolved in one-third glass of water—preferably half an hour before meals. If you're taking cathartics, discontinue them gradually. Keep on with Fleischmann's "XR" Yeast after you've begun to get quick results, until you're thoroughly well. Begin now!

Suffered Chronic Constipation since 12 Years Old. Tells How She has at last Found Wonderful Relief. Thanks to Fruit-a-tives.

Mrs. Williamson, 7420 Bloomfield Ave., Montreal, does not want others to continue suffering from constipation as she used to do. That is why she generously consented to swear to the statement of her experience before a notary in order that you will be convinced of its absolute truth. Mrs. Williamson's statement reads:—

"Since I was twelve years old, I was ill with chronic constipation. Finally I had my appendix removed but constipation still bothered me badly. I never felt good and could not do many things I wanted to.

Three years ago, I started taking Fruit-a-tives and I can truly say they gave me wonderful relief. Their mild, gentle action helped particularly during periods of menstruation when elimination was very difficult.

I don't know of anything that has done me more good than Fruit-a-tives. I am now able to enjoy life once more and I certainly urge anyone who has the same trouble I had to try Fruit-a-tives."

There's a positive proof for you of what Fruit-a-tives can do. Remember Fruit-a-tives are really different. They are the famous remedy that for over a quarter of a century has brought lasting relief to thousands of men and women who suffered from constipation and kindred ills like indigestion, bad breath, sick headaches. Knights of Columbus to Hold Dance

PARIS STYLES

PARIS (UP).—That business about tall trees is not too bad. We've just seen a good example of it.

A Polo-Swiss-Parisian dressmaker by the name of one Madame Calning, started in business for herself about six years ago. She was scarcely even an acorn at that time, for as far as any "public" was concerned, she was working entirely underground. The acorn hadn't yet sprouted above soil. Today, despite hard times and competition with big names and established-for-generations houses, Mme. Calning is having a success that is astonishing with her designs.

Her own mannequin, she knows exactly what she wants to emphasize and just how she wants her things shown, and few indeed are the designers who can model their own creations. She is tall and slender and is literally her own walking advertisement.

In her present collection is a black satin evening gown—no, it starts out being a cocktail dress, so we should really call it that. It has a demure little bateau neckline lined with white satin, and the three-quarter sleeves also have white turn-back cuffs. The waistline is rather high and the skirt long to the ankles—almost completely covering them. After the cocktails and for dinner, the collar at the right shoulder undoes and falls in a soft white satin fold, making a lovely diagonal front décolletage. In the back the fold falls to the left, revealing a deep square back décolletage. It changes the gown completely and is one of the few "transformable" gowns we have seen that is distinctly chic in either the guise of a cocktail dress or the formal dinner frock.

On Beauty

The charming Frances Dee, who is just as sensible as she is beautiful, claims that women who place striving for beauty in the same category as wishing for the moon are extremely foolish. According to Frances, such women seldom, if ever, attain any great beauty or charm of appearance. It's the woman who reaches out for that moon who eventually achieves some semblance of loveliness. For the woman who makes an honest effort is bound to effect some improvement in her appearance.

Frances certainly is right about that. And red hands give a perfect example of just what she means. No woman feels proud or pleased to own red, beefy-looking hands. They are a distinct detriment of beauty, and are most unfortunately incapable of being hidden. A girl can't very well sit on her hands, or wear gloves all the time, you know.

The girl who possesses red, ugly hands, however, may make up her mind that she'll always own them, if she spends her time in bemoaning their condition. For only by taking the proper steps, by administering the proper corrective treatments, can she restore her hands to an attractive, lily-white hue.

The first step in the treatment of red hands is to normalize the circulation of the blood throughout the entire body. For such hands are often due to poor circulation. Take deep-breathing exercises when you rise in the morning. Get plenty of exercise and fresh air. And eliminate all highly-seasoned foods and stimulating drinks from your daily menu. In addition, practice hand exercises every day.

The second step in correcting red hands entails the use of an old remedy known as tanbark. About two handfuls of tanbark should be placed in an ordinary basin of hot water, and the hands soaked in the solution for about ten to fifteen minutes. Then the hands should be removed and thoroughly dried. And to eliminate any possibility of roughness or dryness resulting from the tanbark treatment, a generous application of a rich cream or good hand lotion should then be made to the hands.

HIXON PLACERS IN PAY GRAVEL

Company Plans Extensive Operations—Making a Clean-Up This Month

Illustrating the interest of British capital in British Columbia mining development, J. Duff Stuart, president, announced at the annual meeting of Hixon Creek Gold Mines, Ltd., that 90 per cent of the funds provided for development had come from England.

The company's holdings include about 1,000 acres along Hixon Creek, in the North Cariboo district, midway between Prince George and Quesnel. It is proposed to do extensive hydraulic work, and it is estimated that there are 72,000,000 cubic yards of rich gravel available. In the Ancient Channel property, deposits vary from a few feet to more than 500 feet.

CLEAN-UP TIME
The clean-up will be made some time this month. A four-inch monitor is now being used on the Sawmill lease at the upper end of the company's holdings.

R. H. Gale is managing director of the company, with General Duff Stuart president. Charles Reid is mine manager and director, S. N. Crowther secretary, and Bryan Briscoe, of Prince George, another director.

Sheep Creek Camp Ready for Power

Mine developments in the Sheep Creek Camp will enter a new phase toward the end of October, when transmission lines of the West Kootenay Power Company will be completed and power made available at Reno, Kootenay Belle, Gold Belt, and at the Queen Mine of Sheep Creek Gold Mines, Ltd.

Generators have been installed at the Queen mine and preparations made for beginning mine development with power equipment as soon as the electric transmission lines are completed. Kootenay Belle's mill will be ready before the power is available, officials report. The power company's lines will end Reno's difficulties in connection with shortage of power owing to the long drought this season. This shortage has slowed up Gold Belt operations also, as this company has been buying power from Reno.

News of Mines

By Brie & Co., Ltd.

Macassa Mines will pay a dividend of five cents a share on November 1. This is the seventh mine to go on a dividend-paying basis in the Kootenay Lake gold fields. Current production amounts to over $83,000 per month. The ore is yielding an average of close to $17 per ton.

God's Lake Gold Mines.—H. R. Drummond-Hay, vice-president of God's Lake Gold Mines, has pointed out that slanting on the Akers vein at the first level has disclosed a width of about nine feet of ore. An average of between $20 and $25 in gold to the ton is indicated. The mine is steadily being made ready for erection of a mill. Unofficial observations by competent mining men have indicated a net profit of $15 per ton may be reasonable to expect.

Noranda is erecting a cyanidation unit of 500 tons daily capacity. This is to improve the percentage of gold recovery. Expenditures on concentrator and cyanidation unit will amount to $250,000 and should be completed early in the new year.

Sylvanite is unofficially estimated to have produced 39,000 ounces of gold during the nine months ended September 20. This would represent a value of approximately $1,300,000.

McKenzie Red Lake is making fine headway in mill construction. The production of gold is expected to commence by the end of this year. The plant will start off at 100 tons daily, and with a view toward gradually stepping up to 200 tons. An important orebody under development at the 350-foot level carries between $50 and $60 to the ton in gold.

Dome Mines has produced 160,000 ounces of gold so far during 1934. Parkhill.—The clean-up figures of Parkhill Gold Mines for the month of September, 1934, is $45,000, the best month in the history of the company, and compares with $24,800 for the month of August, 1934. For the past few weeks the mill has been treating an average of sixty-three to sixty-five tons of ore daily. The cross-drifting on the ninth level has been started. The slopes on the upper levels are showing a good grade of ore.

Springer Sturgeon Gold Mines.—According to official word received yesterday, a new vein has been discovered to the north of other showings opened on the property due west of the Brookbank break. The new vein carried good mineralization, but no assay results are available at this time. So far five veins have been located on the claims and brella!

FINANCING OLD ALASKA CLAIMS

British Columbia Capital Interested in Alaska—Principle of Wales

Several British Columbia capitalists are financing Alaska claims. Columbia Gold Mines on Prince of Wales Island, thirty miles from Ketchikan, Alaska. J. W. de B. Farris, K.C., has been elected president of the company, with Col. E. J. Ryan vice-president and managing director. Directors are Arthur Slaght, K.C., Toronto; Brenton S. Brown, F.O. Hodgson and John Boyd, all of Vancouver.

Former owners of the property have spent $300,000 in past development, having driven seven shafts varying from sixty to 400 feet in depth. A forty-ton mill and hydro-electric plant have also been established. About 10,000 tons of profitable milling ore is said to be on the dumps. In addition to ore available for milling.

The present mill will be stepped up to 100 tons daily capacity and a hydro plant will be installed at a cost of $50,000, in accordance with a recommendation by J. D. Galloway, former provincial mineralogist. Initial development will be financed privately, and no stock will be issued to the public.

Mill to Be Ready Early Next Week
Kootenay Belle Gold Mines, Ltd., operating in the Sheep Creek camp, expects to have its Harding-Hadley mill completed about the beginning of next week. Electric power will be available about the third week in October, it is expected. P. M. Black, managing director, reports that more ore is being opened up in "A" vein, West, on the second level. While this is schist formation, ore from three to four inches wide runs through it. Samples assay from 1.25 ounces to 5.68 ounces gold. The schist has been found to carry values likewise and thus should permit of mining up to three or four feet wide for milling purposes.

ISLAND MINES IN GOOD SHAPE

Shipment From "Mac" Vein Expected to Bring in High Return

While details of the first shipment of high-grade ore from the recently opened Mac vein still are being kept secret, officials of Vancouver Island Gold Mines have stated they expect the returns to be high.

Surface values on this vein over a distance of 300 feet were high, with some exceptionally high-grade narrow sections. A new drift was started on the vein across the creek from the power house, and all ore taken from this tunnel is being sacked for shipment to the Tacoma smelter as it is mined.

NEW DISCOVERY
During the past month a number of new discoveries have been made on this gold property on Mineral Hill near Port Alberni. Exploratory work on the Waterfall vein has shown a shear running in a northerly direction, parallel with the Gold Belcher vein, and having a maximum width of eight feet.

Last week the Forty Mules, Jim and Dick veins were uncovered by open cutting.

MORE EXPLORING
In addition to these showings there are five other veins on the Alberni claim, one on the Last Chance and one on the Diane Marie claims which have yet to be thoroughly explored.

Drifting on the Belcher vein in the upper level tunnel is being continued with good results.

With ample funds in the treasury and a considerable amount expected from the initial shipments from the Mac vein, it is probable that Vancouver Island Gold Mines, Ltd., will be the first of the Vancouver Island properties to enter the commercial production stage.

Glacier Creek Is Making Progress

Glacier Creek Mining Co., Ltd., with workings nearly 3,000 feet to the north of the main Dunwell operations, is making good progress on a crosscut tunnel being driven to cut this vein at depth. The Glacier Creek vein is believed to be the extension of the Dunwell vein. At the rate progress is being made on the crosscut, officials expect the vein will be encountered about October 20. The company is making arrangements with the Dunwell Mines, Ltd., to mill the Glacier Creek ore.

The vein which is the present objective was cut several years ago about 160 feet beyond the face of the main tunnel. The results at the Dunwell in the past two years have encouraged the company to resume operations. This company is controlled by R. M. Stewart and associates of Victoria, who also control the Dunwell.

Reports from the property state that the laying of air lines was commenced a few days ago and that full time work on three levels will be under way by the middle of the month. The Blacksmith tunnel is in 105 feet, with samples across the full width of the drift assaying 0.85 ounces gold to the ton, the company advises.

BOBBO EXPECTED TO AID NORGOLD
Norgold Mines, Ltd., which beginning this week will be known as Atlin Pacific Mining Co., Ltd., has established a connection with a large Eastern company already interested in the Atlin district, according to reports in circulation at the week-end. It is indicated that Bobbo Mines, Ltd., which some time ago took a large interest in the Atlin Ruffner, had an engineer examine Norgold, and as a result it is strongly rumored that Bobbo has made arrangements to become associated in the financing of Norgold, and that a Bobbo field engineer is likely to take over the management.

Last week the Forty Mules, Jim and Dick veins were uncovered by open cutting.

MORE EXPLORING
In addition to these showings there are five other veins on the Alberni claim, one on the Last Chance and one on the Diane Marie claims which have yet to be thoroughly explored.

Drifting on the Belcher vein in the upper level tunnel is being continued with good results.

With ample funds in the treasury and a considerable amount expected from the initial shipments from the Mac vein, it is probable that Vancouver Island Gold Mines, Ltd., will be the first of the Vancouver Island properties to enter the commercial production stage.

Glacier Creek Is Making Progress

Glacier Creek Mining Co., Ltd., with workings nearly 3,000 feet to the north of the main Dunwell operations, is making good progress on a crosscut tunnel being driven to cut this vein at depth. The Glacier Creek vein is believed to be the extension of the Dunwell vein. At the rate progress is being made on the crosscut, officials expect the vein will be encountered about October 20. The company is making arrangements with the Dunwell Mines, Ltd., to mill the Glacier Creek ore.

The vein which is the present objective was cut several years ago about 160 feet beyond the face of the main tunnel. The results at the Dunwell in the past two years have encouraged the company to resume operations. This company is controlled by R. M. Stewart and associates of Victoria, who also control the Dunwell.

Reports from the property state that the laying of air lines was commenced a few days ago and that full time work on three levels will be under way by the middle of the month. The Blacksmith tunnel is in 105 feet, with samples across the full width of the drift assaying 0.85 ounces gold to the ton, the company advises.

BOBBO EXPECTED TO AID NORGOLD
Norgold Mines, Ltd., which beginning this week will be known as Atlin Pacific Mining Co., Ltd., has established a connection with a large Eastern company already interested in the Atlin district, according to reports in circulation at the week-end. It is indicated that Bobbo Mines, Ltd., which some time ago took a large interest in the Atlin Ruffner, had an engineer examine Norgold, and as a result it is strongly rumored that Bobbo has made arrangements to become associated in the financing of Norgold, and that a Bobbo field engineer is likely to take over the management.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

"FEE"

Time and again is there borne in upon us the profound truth behind a simple aphorism. Ponder, for example, the French idea as translated in the line: "The more things change, the more they remain the same." And consider its application to our word "fee."

More and more regularly, as we are muddling through do we read of people all over the world who are paying for the things they buy by giving in return not national currency, but the products they either own or make—farmers particularly—who pay medical, legal and other fees with the coin of cattle or some other commodity.

Thus does the wheel of time turn thirty centuries backward in the

"Sorry, old man," he said finally, "but I haven't a bean."

Then, seeing that the driver was not taking it too well, he added: "That's the position, old man; and you can't get blood out of a stone."

"No," agreed the driver, rolling up his sleeves, "but what makes you think you're a stone?"

Completed Voyage of Inspection of Big Pacific Ship

Captain E. Aikman, general superintendent of Canadian Pacific Steamships, who completed a tour of inspection here, yesterday, aboard the S.S. Empress of Japan, went out to the Orient on the last voyage of the S.S. Empress of Asia.

Everything is running smoothly. Captain Aikman stated. There was nothing out of the ordinary to tell the press. He had made trips on all the Pacific ships, and all were functioning splendidly.

The Asia encountered the typhoon, which had done so much damage in Japan, while she was passing through the Inland Sea. While it did no damage to the ship and was not of full force when it was encountered, the wind was bad enough.

Captain Aikman continued to Vancouver aboard the big liner.

CANNERY CRAFT IS TOTAL LOSS

Delphinium, Going Ashore on White Sand Island, Battered by Seas

PRINCE RUPERT, Oct. 9 (CP).—The Royal Fish Company's forty-seven-foot service boat Delphinium, being used as a cannery tender, in connection with the Massett Cannery cannery, at old Massett, sustained such extensive damage by being lashed by a storm, after going ashore on a reef on White Sand Island, of the Desolation group, Friday night, while inbound from Massett, that the vessel was declared a total loss.

The vessel piled up in extremely dark and thick weather, at 8 o'clock, and Captain Andrew Auroy and Engineer Gunnar Clavring, remained aboard until 2 o'clock the following morning, and then took to the rowboat and rowed to Green Island Lighthouse, which took them an hour.

There they were picked up by an American trawling boat, which rode them to Tugwell Island, whence they rowed into Prince Rupert, arriving here late Saturday night. The Pacific Salvage Company dispatched the boat Signal to the scene and found the Delphinium had been so badly damaged that salvage was practically impossible.

FAILS TO UPSET FATHER'S WILL

Court of Appeal Decides Against Howard Jones by Majority Ruling

VANCOUVER, Oct. 8 (CP).—Howard Jones, twenty-two-year-old son of Stephen Jones, Victoria hotel proprietor, who died last year, failed in his attempt to be reinstated on a par with two brothers and two sisters to share in his father's $1,000,000 estate today, when a majority ruling of the Court of Appeal dismissed his appeal against a codicil in his father's will.

The codicil revoked previous bequests to Howard and left $70 monthly instead. The other children were left annuities on a rising scale until they were thirty-five years old, when they receive $100,000 each.

An ill-advised marriage and an allegation that the son and his wife were not living in harmony were reasons given in the codicil for revoking the bequests. The codicil further stated that, if, when he reached thirty-five, Howard was not called on to support his wife, he would receive the $100,000.

Chief Justice J. A. Macdonald and Justices Martin and M. A. Macdonald held that the codicil is not designed to separate the young appellant from his wife, in order to be reinstated in the estate, but, rather, should tend to promote harmony between the couple.

Justices McPhillips and McQuarrie dissented. Mr. Justice McPhillips held that the condition made by the father whereby the son may become entitled to his share of the estate is vicious and impossible of fulfillment, requiring the young man to disengage himself from his legal and moral duties to support his wife.

Served China Without Pay

SIR FREDERICK WHYTE, K.C.S.I.

Who, at the invitation of the Chinese in 1929, was asked to accept the post of adviser to the Government. Taking a keen interest in the Nationalist cause, he refused to accept a salary, in order, as he stated at the time, that there might be no question of his advice being disinterested. He served in the capacity of adviser until 1932. At the inauguration of the Legislative Assembly of India in 1920, he became its first president, remaining there until 1925.

POLICY NOT VERY CLEAR

Differences of Opinion Between Civil and Military Leaders in Manchuria

"It is too early to say much about the development of Japanese policy in Manchuria. It would appear as if the Japanese authorities were not quite sure as to what it is going to be themselves," Sir Frederick Whyte told newspapermen on the arrival of the S.S. Empress of Japan here yesterday. "At least, that is an impression I gathered," he added. "Apparently there is not full accord between the civil and military establishments over policy. When this is reached, we will be in a better position to make observations."

"There is no doubt but that Japan is making a good job of things economically in Manchuria. She has, for instance, put the currency of the country on a satisfactory basis, which was a move in the right direction. It will take some considerable time to establish real order there, and Japan will have her hands full for some time consolidating her position. At present she is busy with transportation matters and the building of the capital. While there is plenty of trouble talk, I do not think it will happen in a hurry, for the reasons stated."

NOT OPTIMISTIC

Commenting on the possibilities of trade development in Manchuria, Sir Frederick was not very optimistic. His impressions were that there would be little opportunity there for big business interests, other than Japanese. The British trade mission, now in the Orient, which had obtained a lot of publicity before it left England, and was encouraged by the Japanese to a considerable extent, would not achieve very much, he implied. The results, in his opinion, would be negligible.

A man of strong personality and intellectual attainments, Sir Frederick has been active in affairs concerning India and the Far East generally for some time. On the formation of the Indian Assembly in 1920, he was made its first president, remaining there until 1925. At the International Conference, held at Honolulu in that year, to consider questions relating to the Pacific, he found favor with the Chinese Nationalist delegates, as he took a more favorable view of their cause than Europeans generally.

He is the author of several books, is a K.C.S.I., has numerous university distinctions, being an LL.D. of Edinburgh, McGill, Michigan and Dartmouth. He will spend two months, he said, in the United States and Canada, before continuing to England.

Tea Merchants Are Confronted With Adversity

W. H. Siegfried, one of the world's greatest tea merchants, was an arrival here yesterday on the S.S. Empress of Japan from the Orient. The headquarters of the firm is in Chicago, but Mr. Siegfried has lived pretty well all his life in Japan, owning a lovely estate in Shimidzu.

Mr. Siegfried has hobbies, several of them, and has spent a lot of money on rare dogs, birds and fish, his kennels, aviary and fish-ponds at his home in Japan being second to none. He expects to retire shortly from active business and enjoy some leisure.

Talking about conditions generally and the tea business in particular yesterday, Mr. Siegfried said it was "lough going," at present.

He left the liner here, proceeding last evening to Seattle, where he caught the Milwaukee train for the East.

LINER SAILS SOUTH TODAY

Niagara Bound for Australia via Hawaii, Fiji and New Zealand, the Canadian-Australasian liner Niagara, Captain W. Martin, will be here for a short time this afternoon. The ship is due to arrive alongside Rithet Piers at 4 o'clock from Vancouver, and scheduled to sail at 5 o'clock for Honolulu, her first port of call.

Among the passengers sailing for Australia, where he will represent Canada at the Melbourne centenary, will be Senator Arthur Meighen, former Prime Minister of Canada, accompanied by Mrs. Meighen and their daughter.

From the United Kingdom by way of Panama and California ports, the Donaldson Line freighter Grellia docked yesterday morning at Rithet Piers. After discharging 100 tons of general cargo at the local docks, the ship proceeded to Mainland ports to complete unloading.

With twenty passengers aboard for Canadian destinations and 1,000 tons of general cargo aboard for discharge at Vancouver, the Helan Maru, of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha Line, is due to reach William Head during the week-end. Harry Clark, local agent, was advised yesterday. The Helan Maru has a total list of 107 travelers aboard, including a troupe of Balinese dancers, who will make a tour of the United States before proceeding to Europe.

CITY OF CAMBRIDGE ABANDONED; MEMBERS OF CREW ALL SAVED

HONGKONG, Oct. 9 (AP).—The freighter City of Cambridge was abandoned today after the remaining twenty members of its crew of eighty had been taken from the grounded vessel by the British cruiser H.M.S. Suffolk.

The City of Cambridge went aground on Pratas Reef during a typhoon which swept the coast over the week-end. The Suffolk is proceeding to Hongkong.

FIRE DESTROYS COUNTRY HOME

Well-Known Residence at Shawnigan Burns With
Contents Total Loss

SHAWNIGAN LAKE, Oct. 9.—The large home of Mrs. A. J. Neff, on the Lamb Road, was completely destroyed by fire at about 10:30 p.m. on Sunday. Leonard, Harold and Herbert Neff, of Victoria, were spending the week-end with their mother. At the time of the fire, which is believed to have been caused by a defective flue, Mrs. Neff and Herbert were out.

Harold Neff, who had left the place temporarily, returned to find the place ablaze, with his brother, Leonard, sleeping on a couch. Partly overcome by the dense smoke the two brothers rushed out.

The well pump was out of order and by the time water was brought to the scene in pails it was too late. The house and contents, a total loss, were partially covered by insurance. Residents, attracted by the dense smoke, and anxious to help, were unable to do anything.

New Division of Polling Districts

SHAWNIGAN LAKE, Oct. 9.—The new Federal voters' list, now being compiled, will show a reclassification of the local districts. The territory formerly comprising the districts of Shawnigan and Cobble Hill will be divided into five distinct polling divisions. The new districts will be: Bamberton, A. J. Jollymore; Cobble Hill, T. P. Barry; Malahat, J. L. Smith; Mill Bay, L. A. Malleon; and Shawnigan, S. J. Heald.

TRAFFIC SIGNAL PROVES POPULAR

Junior Chamber of Commerce Gives
Endorsement—Victims Express
Appreciation

Complete endorsement of the stop and go signal has been given by the Junior Chamber of Commerce. The intersection of Douglas and Yates Streets has been given by the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Citizens, too, are enjoying the security that is afforded them by the signals operated under control of policemen. During the day a number of persons have voiced their appreciation of the new traffic system, saying they are now able to cross the busy intersection with a feeling of safety.

Police Chief Thomas Heatley, yesterday received a letter from one Victoria couple thanking him and his department for installing the signal, and expressing the writers' appreciation of the courteous manner in which constables are directing traffic and assisting pedestrians to cross the streets.

The mistress of the house entered the dining-room just as a burglar was in the act of purloining the silver.

"What are you doing?" asked the lady.

"I'm at your service, madam," replied the thief, glibly.

Little Bedtime Stories

Mistah Mocker Makes Himself at Home

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

At first, when the little meadow and forest people had been asked to pardon the tricks that he and Uncle Billy Possum had played a few were inclined not to. While they were talking the matter over, Mistah Mocker Bird began to sing again that wonderful song of his. It was so beautiful that by the time it was ended every one was ready to grant the pardon. They crowded around Mistah Mocker Bird, and because he is good-natured, he made his voice sound like the voice of each one who spoke to him. Of course they thought that was great fun, and by the time Uncle Billy Possum's moonlight party broke up Mistah Mocker Bird knew that he had made so many friends that he could stay in the Green Forest as long as he pleased.

But there were a lot of little people who were not at Uncle Billy Possum's party because they go to bed instead of going out at night. Of course, they heard all about the party the next morning, and were very anxious indeed to see the stranger with the wonderful voice.

So Mistah Mocker Bird went calling with 'O' Mistah Buzzard, and they visited all the little meadow and forest people who had not been at the party. Of course, Mistah Mocker Bird had to show off his wonderful voice to each one. When he had finished he was tuckered out, was Mistah Mocker Bird, but he was happy, for now he had made friends and could live on the edge of the Green Forest with his old friends 'O' Billy Possum and 'O' Mistah Buzzard.

So Mistah Mocker Bird soon made himself at home, and because he was happy he would sing all day long. And sometimes when the moon was shining he would sing for joy. Now Peter Rabbit thought Mocker Bird's voice such a wonderful thing that he used to follow Mocker Bird.

"Chugurum!" replied Grandfather Frog. "Go ask Mr. Mocker Bird." "But he is asleep," said Peter. "He can't hear the whistle that was all that Mocker Bird had not come by his voice honestly, and he thought Peter Rabbit was asking just to hear a story."

"Chugurum!" replied Grandfather Frog. "Go ask Mr. Mocker Bird." "But he is asleep," said Peter. "He can't hear the whistle that was all that Mocker Bird had not come by his voice honestly, and he thought Peter Rabbit was asking just to hear a story."

Colonist Talking News Shows Shots Of Kidnap Suspect

THE Daily Colonist Universal Newsreel, now appearing on the screen of the Dominion Theatre, shows the latest events of international import, brought to Victoria close on the heels of happenings that have stirred the world. Hauptmann, held in the world-famous kidnapping case of the Lindbergh baby, is shown as he stands, closely guarded by wardens. Premier Hepburn, of Ontario, speaks. Scenes from the Pennsylvania train wreck, when many lost their lives, vie with dramatic glimpses of the rescue from the Massachusetts shipwreck. The finest horseflesh in the country faces the hurdles in the thrilling race at Long Island. The latest pictures of Prince George and his fiancée are flashed on the screen.

COUGARS GETTING LESS IN NUMBER

Found Dead at Many Places Presumably From Starvation Due to Deer's Scarcity

UCLEULET, Oct. 9.—After a thrilling encounter and chase, H. J. Hillier, with the aid of his faithful dogs, was successful in killing a large female cougar while on patrol on the government telegraph line on Friday. After shooting the large cat, Hillier searched for the almost full-grown kitten which was with its mother, but, owing to the fading daylight, it was impossible to trail it.

Several other cougars have been bagged on the West Coast recently, and reports tell of several which proved menacing, but which evaded the hunters. One report comes from Estevan of a face-to-face encounter which culminated in the sudden and complete disappearance of the cougar.

Although the cougars still continue to prove a menace to the settlers in the more isolated parts, it seems to be the general opinion that there is a decrease in their number. Since the season opened for deer on the West Coast, a very noticeable scarcity is reported, this being attributed to the large number of cougars which have been preying on the deer. At many points along the coast, dead cougars have been reported to have been found, the reason of their death being a mystery. The general opinion is that they were overcome from sheer lack of their natural food, there being such a scarcity of deer and other wild life. All the carcasses found were said to be in a very thin and starved condition.

Another supposition is that some disease is among them, as the condition seems prevalent along the coast, from Quesnel to Barkley Sound.

However, now that nature seems to have taken the balance of affairs into her own control, it is believed that the cougars are naturally on the decrease and the deer again on the increase.

A large black bear have been bagged and they are reported to be very numerous along the coast, and in one settlement, proved very bold and destructive in broad daylight.

And sometimes when the moon was smiling he would sing for sheer joy around just to hear him fool others by making his voice sound like theirs. It was great fun. Peter and Mocker became great friends, and so when Peter heard it whispered around that Mistah Mocker Bird had not come by his wonderful voice honestly he didn't believe a word of it and was very indignant. Of course he couldn't go to Mistah Mocker Bird himself and ask him, for he didn't want Mocker to know that such unkind things were being said. Finally he thought of Grandfather Frog, who is very old and very wise. "He'll know," said Peter, as he posted to the Smiling Pool.

"If you please, Grandfather Frog, how does it happen that Mocker can make it sound like the voice of anyone whom he hears?" asked Peter.

Now Grandfather Frog was feeling out of sorts that morning. He hadn't heard the whisper that Mistah Mocker Bird had not come by his voice honestly, and he thought Peter Rabbit was asking just to hear a story.

"Chugurum!" replied Grandfather Frog. "Go ask Mr. Mocker Bird." "But he is asleep," said Peter. "He can't hear the whistle that was all that Mocker Bird had not come by his voice honestly, and he thought Peter Rabbit was asking just to hear a story."

ST. LOUIS BLANKS DETROIT IN FINAL FIXTURE

Cards Jubilant Over Great Win Against Tigers

Singing, Shouting and All-Round Merriment Echoes Through St. Louis Dressing Room After Game—Cochrane Congratulates Frisch—Latter Talks of Violent Demonstration

By CHARLES W. DUNKLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer
DETROIT, Oct. 9 (AP).—Singing, shouting and tossing their baseball equipment all around the room, the victorious St. Louis Cardinals indulged in a wild celebration, when they reached their dressing room after routing the Tigers to win the world's baseball championship today.

Frankie Frisch, plucky little leader of the Cardinals, wandered around the room with an unread telegram in his hand, too dazed and speechless to say a word. Suddenly he found a hand gripping his. It was that of Mickey Cochrane, manager of the losing Tigers.

"Frankie, you beat us. Congratulations," Frisch's throat was too choked to say a word. He slapped Cochrane on the back a half-dozen times, and there was just a trace of a tear in his eyes.

"It was a tough series, and I'm glad it is over and I'm glad we won," Frisch said. "We beat a great ball club. Cochrane is a great manager. You can have all the 300 hitters, but I'll take that two-base hit I got in the third inning. "That was a $1,000,000 hit to me." Within a few seconds the room was like an insane asylum. The conquering Cardinals started singing and shouting and Dizzy Dean was surrounded, with every one of the Cardinals shaking his hand. He was wearing a white tropical sun helmet and carrying a big, rubber inflated tiger, painted yellow with brown stripes.

Frisch, referring to the violent demonstration which followed the incident between Joe Medwick, Cardinal left fielder, and Marvin Owen, Tiger third sacker, was inclined to pass it over "as one of those things."

"The kid wouldn't spike anybody," he said. "He was just sliding into third base."

The Tigers were a beaten lot of players when they came from the field. They seemed at first to be broken in spirit. Cochrane, their manager, laid down for a second, and then, without saying a word, shouldered his way across the hall to enter the Cardinal house to congratulate Frisch.

"It wasn't our day," Cochrane commented. "It was the toughest series I've ever played in. Everything happened to us today."

HOOP SQUADS TO PERFORM AT HIGH GYM

Three Fixtures Billed This Evening—Beavers to Meet Tillicums

With the Beavers, last year's city and island intermediate "A" champions, who have stepped up to men's senior "B" this year, opposing the Tillicums in the feature attraction, three hoop fixtures will be presented at the Victoria High School gymnasium, this evening, by quintettes in the Victoria and District Basketball League. Of the six clubs performing, five will be making their season's debut.

Appearing in the first game, which is billed to commence at 7:30 o'clock, will be Kinsman-Gillespie and the Canadian Scottish intermediate "A" quintettes. The fuel merchants were runners-up in the "B" division last season, being nosed out in the final by the clever Chinese Students. They have moved up this year, and hope to make a good showing in the new division.

Canadian Scottish will not only be making their season's debut, but their first appearance in the league. Details will be out for their second straight victory when they stack up against the Centennial Black Hawks in the second game.

Last week they took the Regents into camp after a great battle, and will be favored to take the measure of the Hawks.

BEAVERS PLAY TILlicUMS
Frank Shandley's Beavers will trot out a young and fast team for their season's debut against Bill Passmore and his fighting Tillicums.

The club, with a few exceptions, will be the same as that which made a clean sweep in the intermediate "A" series last year, and should prove capable of extending the club's record in the men's senior "B" division. The Tillicums have strengthened up for the present season's play and already have their eyes on the title won by the morning newspaper representatives.

Columbus Captures "Little Series" by Winning Odd Game

Turn Back Toronto Maple Leafs, 13-8, to Win Annual Play-Off Between International and American Association Leagues

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 9 (AP).—Six Toronto pitchers were unable to still the booming bats of Columbus Red Birds, in the deciding game of the little world series here, tonight, and for the second consecutive year the Ohio team, twice champions of the American Association, copped the minor league championship.

Emulating their older brothers in St. Louis, who clinched the world series this afternoon, the Red Birds piled up thirteen runs before 29,243 fans and held the invading Canadians to eight. The Toronto team won the afternoon contest, today, to even the series at four-all, taking the verdict, 5-1.

The Birds counted four runs in the first on Myers' triple, T. Moore's single, Sweeney's double and a home run by Heath, but the lead lasted only until the third, when the Maple Leafs, after counting two in the second on doubles by Richardson and Thomas, and a single by Lucas,

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 9 (AP).—Six Toronto pitchers were unable to still the booming bats of Columbus Red Birds, in the deciding game of the little world series here, tonight, and for the second consecutive year the Ohio team, twice champions of the American Association, copped the minor league championship.

Emulating their older brothers in St. Louis, who clinched the world series this afternoon, the Red Birds piled up thirteen runs before 29,243 fans and held the invading Canadians to eight. The Toronto team won the afternoon contest, today, to even the series at four-all, taking the verdict, 5-1.

The Birds counted four runs in the first on Myers' triple, T. Moore's single, Sweeney's double and a home run by Heath, but the lead lasted only until the third, when the Maple Leafs, after counting two in the second on doubles by Richardson and Thomas, and a single by Lucas,

Security Prices Receive Setback At Wall Street

NEW YORK, Oct. 9 (AP).—Recovery forces in security markets ran into an unexpected obstacle today in the news of the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia and French Foreign Minister Louis Barthou.

While the prospect of political repercussions was minimized in international banking quarters, efforts to rally stocks were abandoned when the news reached Wall Street.

Sales totaled 451,400 shares.

McLellan Stores, common and preferred, and McCrory, preferred, advanced about 3 points. American Can, J. I. Case, U.S. Steel, Chrysler, Eastman Kodak, Radio, preferred, "B," and Union Pacific, finished fractionally to about a point lower.

In common with other security groups, recovery of United States Government bonds was reversed after their advance had extended into the seventh consecutive session.

The assassination news unsettled the bond market, in late trading, also. Government loans turned easy.

French 7s lost 41-2 points at 178; Italian 7s 21-4 lower at 941-2; and Yugoslav State Mortgage Bank 7s off a point at 32.

Virginia Vane Says:

GETTING RID OF UNATTRACTIVE BEAU SHOULD NOT BE DIFFICULT

Dear Virginia Vane: How can I get rid of an unattractive beau? He is young and shy and full of inferiority complexes. He is devoted to me and hangs around the house, refusing to be interested in any girl friends I introduce him to.

He has few social graces, and consequently can't fill in when there is a party. I don't want to hurt his feelings by telling him the truth, but he will not be put off with ordinary excuses.

I get sick and tired of having him around, but simply don't know what to do about it. I know that other boys whom I admire are inclined to ridicule this friendship, which is no fault of mine. The boy is decent, honest, etc., but has had so little experience that he is awkward and self-conscious.—Anne.

There is really nothing simpler in the world than to give the air to an unattractive beau. Any girl who is willing to forego the extra admiration given her by an unwanted suitor can rid herself of the victim in half an hour.

But as a matter of fact there aren't many girls in the world who have the courage to be mercifully truthful. Most of them prefer to stall along, hinting and suggesting, and all the time a little proud of the devotion they have inspired so easily.

Confess the truth to yourself, Anne, that you don't want to give the boy such a blow as to set him free of his slavery to you. You don't want him to look on you as a cruel, harsh woman who has definitely sent him out of her life forever. You want him to regard you as a dear, sweet, lovely girl, even though such regard causes him pain.

All you have to do to eliminate him from the picture is to tell him exactly what you've told me. His masculine vanity will do the rest.

But why can't you make a place for this boy in your life? Other girls have been willing to help this kind of boy, even though it has meant some sacrifice of time and energy. It's in a good cause.

The self-conscious inferiority-complexed youth needs help. No one can give it to him better than the girl he admires. And she need not keep up any pretence of being interested in him except as a friend.

If you wanted to put yourself aside for the moment—if you were willing to ignore the meaningless ridicule of other swains—you might do a bit of good work for which you could be justly proud.

Tell the boy that you honestly don't care for him except as a friend—and that you never will. Explain that you don't want to keep him hanging around if it is going to cause him pain.

If he's willing to go on seeing you on a strictly platonic basis, then try to bring out his best qualities by reminding him of them.

Keep your manner impersonal, but build up his self-confidence by asking him his opinion occasionally, by deferring to his judgment, by seeing to it that when he is one of a group the others are not allowed to monopolize the conversation.

Tell him that you cannot see him often, but when you have a date with him be sure that he is very much in the centre of the stage. When other girls are around give him every chance to be attractive to them. You can do so much good for a boy like this if you will make an honest effort. Kill his infatuation for you completely by adopting such a resolutely impersonal attitude that he comes to look on you as a pal and nothing more.

I wish you and hundreds of other girls like you would realize how much good you could do for shy young manhood if you'd put aside your vanity and your fear of ridicule and make a genuine attempt to help another human being.

HUSBAND MAY PROVE WORSE TYRANT THAN FATHER

Dear Virginia Vane: I am eighteen and have been unhappy at home ever since I could remember. I am planning to marry a man much older than myself in order to escape from home. I know that better than the tyranny of a father and mother who care for I could not be more unhappy than I am now, and anything would nothing but themselves.—Unhappy.

The tyranny of a husband can be a hundred times more soul-destroying than that of mother and father. For in the latter case one can always hope for escape through financial independence, while escape from a loveless marriage presents a thousand insurmountable difficulties.

And I am afraid that any husband who discovers, as he must in time, that his wife doesn't love him is bound to become a tyrant of one sort or another. When man realizes that he is not loved, all his kindness and sweetness of nature wither and die, and he is apt to become the selfish, cold, domestic bully who causes his young wife untold suffering.

Don't jump from the frying pan into the fire. Wait till you can escape from an unhappy home into either a happy marriage or a self-supporting, self-respecting existence.

(Copyright, 1934, by The Associated Newspapers)

There had been an accident, and your name, and I will tell you the sympathetic old lady stooped mother. "Thank you," gasped she and smoothed his forehead. "My victim," but my mother knows my poor fellow," she crooned, "tell me name."

SYNOPSIS
Joan Dudley, vacationing in Maine with her wealthy aunt, Adelaide Delafield, is engaged to marry Drew Hallam, man of the world, who is twice the age of his fiancée. Mrs. Delafield becomes restless and decides to leave the log house, run by Penelope Sears, a widow, where she, Joan, Hallam and his sister, Nancy, have been stopping.

CHAPTER III
The dinner was, as usual, an achievement. From soup to short-cake everything was superlative. Penelope's guests were aware that at no resort hotel would they find roast chicken so delicious, vegetables straight from the garden, such whipped cream and fresh blackberries between layers of flaky crust.

While there was a woman to help with the heavy work about the house, Penelope did all of the cooking and serving. She had no sense of degradation in any household task. A sea captain's granddaughter could not be lowered by her occupation. A princess with a tray in her hand was still a princess!

Throughout the meal Joan had little to say, and when after dinner they adjourned to the living-room and while the others had their cigarettes, she sat among them, smiling into the fire, rapturous in the thought of her happy secret, yet shy because of it.

The discussion had to do with their changed plans. "We shall have six weeks before the hotel closes," Adelaide said, "and we hope you'll go when we do."

Nancy was eager. "I'd love it. But Drew will have to decide." Hallam, delaying his decision, asked: "Is there anything for a man to do down there? I'm keen for the out-of-doors, you know. That's why I came to this place."

"As much as there is to do here. You can ride with Joan, walk with Joan, play bridge with Joan..." Adelaide's voice trailed off into laughter.

Hallam laughed, too. He tossed his cigarette into the fire, then with a quick lift of his head faced Mrs. Delafield:

"If you'll promise to let me play with Joan for the rest of my life I'll agree to anything."

Joan caught her breath. How daring! And how well he knew Aunt Adelaide. She adored sensations. His boldness would please her. The brown eyes that in the old face sparkled. "So that's it, you want to marry Joan?"

"Who wouldn't want to marry her?"

"Oh, well, she's not a belle and a beauty."

"She is more than that—she is Springtime and violets and morning stars..." His eyes as he looked down at Joan burned with a deep light. "Give me the word and I'll carry her off."

Adelaide demanded of Joan: "My dear, do you want to marry this—highwayman?"

"Oh, he isn't that, Aunt Adelaide." "Why not? He wants to steal you from me." Mrs. Delafield was playing a game and getting a lot out of it. She wanted Joan married, yet it pleased her to enact the role of reluctant guardian. "He wants to steal you, my dear," she reiterated, "and I repeat that he's a robber."

Hallam drew Joan up beside him. "Give us your blessing, Aunt Adelaide," he said with a sort of delightful impudence.

The old woman glowed under his smiling glance. "A thousand blessings if you wish." She made a little gesture with her hands.

Joan kissed her aunt. She wanted to cry in her lover's arms; but, of course she couldn't. She could only stand blushing and smiling when Nancy said, "You're too good for him, and Drew flung back. 'You don't know how good I can be, Nancy.'"

Later in the evening, when Drew was at the telephone getting Grantham and information about the hotel, Joan went out to the kitchen, where Mrs. Sears was washing dishes. The big room was warm and shining, and Penelope was making the matter of dish-washing an attractive rite, with her bright

Joan, her snowy aubs, the smooth, checked towels of Irish linen. "I am sorry we are going away," Joan said.

"I am sorry you have to go."

"Nothing will ever be quite—like this..."

Penelope, setting hot plates in rack, said: "You mean being up here?"

"Yes."

There was silence for a moment between them, then Joan asked, "Can't I help you with the dishes?"

"Oh, but I'll get an apron."

She found one of Penelope's in a drawer. It was of blue gingham and it covered her up. Below it shone the silver slippers.

Penelope, caught by the shine of the little shoes said: "I never wore silver slippers."

"These are my first. Before I lived with Aunt Adelaide I had very few pretty things."

"Do you like living with her better than at home?"

"Oh, yes. It has been rather wonderful. Of course if mother were alive I shouldn't want to be away from her. But then if I hadn't been with Aunt Adelaide, I shouldn't have met Drew Hallam. I am going to marry him, Mrs. Sears. I wanted you to know."

Penelope waited for a moment before she said: "My dear child, I wish you happiness..."

"I am so happy now that I feel a bit frightened—as if it couldn't last. Yet I know it will—last."

Penelope's brain rapped. "How can you know it?" But she did not voice her doubt. She went on washing dishes.

When Drew Hallam came into the kitchen to look for Joan, she was wiping the last one. He frowned as he saw her occupation.

"Take off that apron, Joan. I don't like it."

She stood in front of him. "Am I always to obey orders?"

"When it comes to your looks."

He had crossed the room and was busy with the button on the bib of the apron. It was at the back of her neck, and for the second time that night she thrilled to his touch.

"There," he said at last, "and don't do it again. You belong to beautiful things, not to serviceable ones."

He turned away without a word to Penelope. But Joan, frowning him, waved a hand and said with a note of defiance, "I'll do it again sometime, Mrs. Sears, when he isn't looking."

In the hall Hallam stopped. "You mustn't do it."

"Because you should be above it?"

Joan was puzzled. "Above what?"

His tone was impatient. "Don't pin me down to definitions. I want your loveliness untouched by practical things." He put a finger under her chin. "Look at me, Joan."

She lifted her eyes to his, her cheeks pink with excitement. "I want you beautiful always..." for me...

How strong he was! Her bronze head lay now in the hollow of his arm. How strong he was...

The door was open and they went out into the forest. The moonlight came splashing through the trees in a golden shower. The dark branches made shadows on the ground.

Joan said, leaning on her lover's arm. "Don't you adore the stillness?"

He smiled down at her. She was like a nymph in the enchanted night, with her pale draperies and the sheen of her silver. "Of course I love it. With you to make it perfect."

"I don't mean that," she insisted. "Even if you were not here I should feel there was something solemn and sacred about it—like a cathedral. Do you know what I mean? It's as if there were nothing between the tops of the trees and heaven."

He laughed aloud. "You funny little thing."

Her eyes were startled. "What do you mean by 'funny'?" she asked.

"With your raptures and enthusiasm. They are out of date, my sweet."

"Don't you like them?"

"Of course. Only you mustn't live too much in the clouds, or I can't follow you."

He caught her up in his arms at that, and as he set her down he whistled under his breath a waltz song from a popular musical play.

"We have never danced together. Let's see how well we do it."

They took a step or two, tentatively, then swept on. It was a magical night, the pine needles made a soundless floor under their feet, the moonlight splintered against Joan's hair in a thousand sparkles.

(To Be Continued)

Mr. Jones was airing his views at the dinner-table about the monotony of women.

"These modern girls who profess they are never going to marry," he said, venomously. "Why, everybody knows they will believe their own words at the first opportunity."

His wife kept a discreet silence.

"Why, Martha," he said, "I once heard you say that you'd never marry the best man alive."

"Well, I didn't," said Mrs. Jones.

SYNOPSIS
Joan Dudley, vacationing in Maine with her wealthy aunt, Adelaide Delafield, is engaged to marry Drew Hallam, son of the world, who is twice the age of his fiancée. Mrs. Delafield becomes restless and decides to leave the log house, run by Penelope Sears, a widow, where she, Joan, Hallam and his sister, Nancy, have been stopping.

CHAPTER III
The dinner was, as usual, an achievement. From soup to short-cake everything was superlative. Penelope's guests were aware that at no resort hotel would they find roast chicken so delicious, vegetables straight from the garden, such whipped cream and fresh blackberries between layers of flaky crust.

While there was a woman to help with the heavy work about the house, Penelope did all of the cooking and serving. She had no sense of degradation in any household task. A sea captain's granddaughter could not be lowered by her occupation. A princess with a tray in her hand was still a princess!

Throughout the meal Joan had little to say, and when after dinner, they adjourned to the living-room, and while the others had their cigarettes, she sat among them, smiling into the fire, rapturous in the thought of her happy secret, yet shy because of it.

The discussion had to do with their changed plans. "We shall have six weeks before the hotel closes," Adelaide said, "and we hope you'll go when we do."

Nancy was eager. "I'd love it. But Drew will have to decide." Hallam, delaying his decision, asked: "Is there anything for a man to do down there? I'm keen for the out-of-doors, you know. That's why I came to this place."

"As much as there is to do here, you can ride with Joan, walk with Joan, play bridge with Joan..." Adelaide's voice trailed off into laughter.

Hallam laughed, too. He tossed his cigarette into the fire, then with a quick lift of his head faced Mrs. Delafield:

"If you'll promise to let me play with Joan for the rest of my life I'll agree to anything."

Joan caught her breath. How daring! And how well he knew Aunt Adelaide. She adored sensations. His boldness would please her. The brown eyes in the old face sparkled. "So that's it, you want to marry Joan?"

"Who wouldn't want to marry her?"

"Oh, well, she's not a belle and a beauty."

"She is more than that—she is Springtime and violets and morning stars..." His eyes as he looked down at Joan burned with a deep light. "Give me the word and I'll carry her off."

Adelaide demanded of Joan: "My dear, do you want to marry this highwayman?"

"Oh, he isn't that, Aunt Adelaide."

"Why not? He wants to steal you from me." Mrs. Delafield was playing a game and getting a lot out of it. She wanted Joan married, yet it pleased her to enact the role of reluctant guardian. "He wants to steal you, my dear," she reiterated, "and I repeat that he's a robber."

Hallam drew Joan up beside him. "Give us your blessing, Aunt Adelaide," he said with a sort of delightful impudence.

The old woman glowed under his smiling glance. "A thousand blessings if you wish." She made a little gesture with her hands.

Joan kissed her aunt. She wanted to cry in her lover's arms; but of course she couldn't. She could only stand blushing and smiling when Nancy said, "You're too good for him, and Drew flung back, 'You don't know how good I can be, Nancy.'"

Later in the evening, when Drew was at the telephone getting Gracie's head and information about the hotel, Joan went out to the kitchen, where Mrs. Sears was washing dishes. The big room was warm and shining, and Penelope was making the matter of dish-washing an attractive rite, with her bright eyes. "With your raptures and enthusiasms. They are out of date, my sweet."

"Don't you like them?"

"Of course. Only you mustn't live too much in the clouds, or I can't follow you."

He caught her up in his arms at that, and as he set her down he whistled under his breath a waltz song from a popular musical play. "We have never danced together. Let's see how well we do it."

They took a step or two, tentatively, then swept on. It was a magical night, the pine needles made a sounder floor under their feet, the moonlight splintered against Joan's hair in a thousand sparkles.

Mr. Jones was airing his views at the dinner-table about the moon-stancy of women.

"These modern girls who profess they are never going to marry," he said, venomously. "Why, everybody knows they will believe their own words at the first opportunity."

His wife kept a discreet silence. "Why, Martha," he said, "I once heard you say that you'd never marry the best man alive."

"Well, I didn't," said Mrs. Jones.
